Luverne High School seniors earn time off from school through Service Day

By Mavis Fodness

Each year Luverne High School's upcoming graduates select a day as Senior Skip Day, celebrating their last days of classes by not attending or skipping school.

Instead of trying to keep the students from missing class, district officials have given students a way to earn a half-day off from school through Senior Service Day.

"It was done in a way knowing that seniors were going to have a skip day, so instead of fighting it, why not give them an opportunity to give back to the community that has supported and blessed them with a great education," said Ryan Johnson, principal at Luverne High School.

"This day is usually a very fun day. We end it with a picnic in the (city) park and then they have the afternoon free."

This year the 86 graduating seniors each signed up for one of 12 locations, offering their assistance for three hours in a variety of tasks.

Persistent drought prompts city to impose watering ban for third year in row

By Lori Sorenson

For the third year in a row, the city of Luverne has started the spring season with a watering ban to limit the use of city water.

Council members took action on the ban during their Tuesday night, April 28, meeting following discussion about Luverne's limited water supply.

"It's no big secret the static and pumping levels aren't going in the right direction," City Administrator John Call said about the city's well levels.

He said the city of Luverne, which relies on a shallow water aquifer system, is in a regional drought area and has received minimal rainfall this spring.

"We've had minimal moisture since July of last year, leading to low static and pumping levels for most of the shallow wells in our system," Call said.

Because of the dry conditions and Luverne's shallow aquifers, outdoor watering and sprinkling is not allowed.

The ban approved at Tuesday's meeting makes exceptions for some watering, such as new lawns, new seeding, new sod and hand garden sprinkling.

The water restriction will be in effect until further notice.

Council members remarked at Tuesday's meeting that Luverne will be connected to the Lewis and Clark Regional Water System later this year, ensuring a more reliable water supply, even during regional droughts.

Last year at this time, the watering ban was put in place when Luverne and Rock County were roughly 15 inches below normal rainfall.

Then the flood of June 2014 delivered 15 inches of rain in one weekend, raising static well levels and prompt-

Newman triplets turn 16 this year; Boyenga triplets coming soon

By Mavis Fodness

On Sunday millions of women will be showered with gifts and words of appreciation.

Mother's Day will take on a triple meaning this year for the Anthony and Megan Boyenga household in Kanaranzi Township.

The young couple learned in early February that they were expecting their third child — as well as the fourth and fifth.

"We never, ever thought of having triplets," Megan said. "We braced ourselves for twins possibly."

With the sudden expansion of their household, (the couple has two boys, Rayden, 7, and Coyer, almost 2), the Boyengas have set up a Facebook page to update friends and family on the triplets' progress.

The periodic updates save the couple from repeating basic details.

Titled "Boyenga Triplets," the site has garnered 325 likes so far.

"The more support you have, the better," Anthony said.

Having the site has alleviated some of Megan's anxiety of being a mother to three babies all at once.

"I was terrified," she admitted. "How am I going to do this?"

Newman triplets turn 16

To answer some of Megan's questions, the Star Herald reached out to Luverne native Gina (Jarchow) Newman, who with her husband, Rob, is a mother of triplets. The three girls turn 16 this fall.

"It has been a blessing having three girls the same age," she said. "They are good friends and don't often fight."

Gina easily passed on tips she learned being a first-time parent in 1999.

"We tried to plan ahead for some things, borrowed what we could rather than purchase all the big ticket items, and tried to just go with whatever was thrown at us," she said.

Support from friends and family members helped the Newmans get through the first few months, adjusting to three infants. Managing three children of the same age was easier once the girls became toddlers.

"To get out of the house, we would go swimming, play in parks, or find a lake where the girls could explore and throw rocks in the water," Gina said. "It doesn't have to cost a lot to entertain toddlers."

Living on the farm near Wilmont, the girls were given chores as they grew older, and they celebrated birthdays and holidays with each receiving approximately the same amount — to an extent.

"Everyone asks us if they will each get their own car (as they turn 16)," Gina said.

The answer is no. The girls will figure out how to share one vehicle.

Crisis Center director resigns post in Luverne

By Lori Sorenson

The Southwest Crisis Center is seeking a new director for its Rock County office after Raevette Loonan resigned early in April.

"It was time for a change," she told the Star Herald last week.

Her resignation letter was dated April 8, and she is now training in a position at First Farmers and Merchants Bank in Luverne.

"At least we'll still get to see her in town, and that's where I do my banking," said Crisis Center volunteer Mary Lou Mulligan.

She said the role of Crisis Center volunteers is also changing, and she's not sure she'll continue helping the local office.

"They're now requiring 40 hours of training for us to answer phones and handle paperwork," Mulligan said.

"A lot of us there are old-timers, and I'm not sure we're going to do it."

She said the Crisis Center and the people it serves will miss Loonan's passion and dedication to the cause of ending domestic violence and sexual assault.

"I thought she did a great job," Mulligan said, "especially with the school kids."

Loonan said it was volunteers like Mulligan who made the Crisis Center effective.

"I may have been the face at the desk, but I never did this job alone," Loonan said Friday.

"I had good volunteers and other professionals in the community who were part of the support network for survivors."

She said judges, attorneys, law

Finnish exchange student learns about schedules, small-town living

By Mavis Fodness

During his cultural exchange experience in Luverne, Akseli Hatakka from Helsinki, Finland, has garnered a nickname, a new haircut and an understanding of staying on schedule.

For the past eight months, Hatakka has been hosted by the Cyndi Priebe family and adopted the nickname "Axl" at the beginning of his 10-month stay in the United States because people stumbled pronouncing his name.

Axl comes from Axl Rose, the lead singer for the 1980s rock 'n' roll band, Guns N' Roses.

"Music is a passion of mine," said the easy-going 18-year-old. "(Axl) was the closest American version of my name."

Hatakka has expanded this passion for music by playing guitar in the high school jazz band and participating in its concert choir. He hopes to make music a part of a career choice once he returns to Finland in June.

Hatakka is participating in the AFS Intercultural Program intended to help students develop the knowledge, skills and understanding needed to create a more just and peaceful world, according to its website.

For Hatakka, his exchange experience also included taking part in sporting events, something he had little experience in at home.

"I am not the most athletic type of person," he said. "I'm glad I did — I am in better condition."

Hatakka said he chose the sports activities of cross country and wrestling, because he could compete individually to better his skills. While he was familiar with cross country, because he used to run at home, wrestling was an unfamiliar sport.

"My goal was not to get pinned," he said.

He achieved that in Luverne's last team meet during sectional competition in Worthington.

"I lasted the six minutes," he said.

He may have lasted six-minutes on the mat, but his normal shaggy haircut received a little trimming by the wrestling team captains when Hatakka didn't have his hair trimmed on his own. Excessive long hair, especially bangs, is prohibited, according to Minnesota High School League rules.

"I had that coming," Hatakka said of the impromptu ragged haircut.

He fully admits he is a procrastinator.

Cyndi Priebe said the change to following a daily routine was something she had to help Hatakka work through.

"He has been surprised by the expectations of coming to class regularly and doing his work around the home," she said. "He has matured quite a bit."

From discussions with Hatakka's mother back in Finland, Priebe learned that life there is at a slower pace, even in the large metropolitan city of Helsinki. Public school is conducted more like college, where students have classes on a weekly basis versus every day.

The new pace is something Hatakka has been getting used to, thanks to Seth, a junior in high school.

"Sometimes Seth thinks he is the older brother," she said.

It is a role that Seth has embraced.

"It's been really good," he said of the experience.

Each has taught the other different guitar playing techniques and, while Seth said Hatakka handles the skateboard better than he, both have developed better moves.

One thing he has learned about his new brother is that he needs a lot of sleep.

"(Axl) can't focus otherwise," Seth said.

Before Hatakka leaves in June, the two will take on one of Seth's activities — mixed martial arts.

Once back home, Hatakka will finish his last year of high school before taking the test for college.

enforcement officers, family services and others played a role.

"Everyone helped the survivors and we all had to be on the same page."

Loonan focused a good share of her time trying to break the cycle of abuse by educating children early on about what's OK and what isn't in terms of physical contact.

Elementary students learned the difference between "good touch and bad touch" and they also learned through a program called "hands are not for hitting."

High school students benefited from Loonan's talks about date rape and signs and symptoms of abusive relationships.

Loonan was in charge of Luverne's office of the Southwest Crisis Center since 1994 providing assistance to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

People come to the center in emergency circumstances needing a safe place to stay, gas money and some short-term personal supplies.

While she'd like to see an end to those abuses in local families, Loonan has often said it's rewarding to at least be a part of the healing process for those who are helped through the office.

Lorie Line and her Fab 5 at Palace May 9

Pianist Lorie Line will return to Luverne this weekend for her popular intimate evening series.

During her Saturday, May 9, performance at the Historic Palace Theatre, Line plans to play the classics and originals that have made her one of the most well-known pianists in the country.

She will also highlight a few songs from her upcoming CD/Music Book, "The Heritage Collection, Volume Seven" releasing at the end of May.

Line has performed on over 2,000 stages in her 25-year career, known mainly for her holiday tours but also for her non-seasonal "intimate series" that bring her to smaller towns.

This year's Fab 5 features young talent from Minnesota, including Robbie Nordstrom on violin, Derek Bromme (from Duluth) on the trombone, Marcus Farrow on drums, bassist Christian Harger and guitarist Scott Deming.

"Surrounding myself with the best players possible makes making music so much more fun, and after touring all these years, I know how important that is ... and my crowd loves young, amazing talent."

Line has produced three television specials for PBS. Perhaps the most published pianist of her time, she has recorded 47 CDs and has published 47 books of music of her arrangements and compositions.

Line and her husband/tour manager, Tim, live in Orono on Lake Minnetonka.

Saturday's show starts at 7 p.m. and tickets are available at the Carnegie Cultural Center, 281-8294.

Line will be in the lobby at the Palace following the performance to greet her fans, sign CDs and music books, and take photos.

Demolition crews began tearing down this property on East Barck Avenue Thursday morning, April 20.

East Barck Avenue becomes 'open canvas'

By Lori Sorenson

The properties on the east end of Barck Avenue are under demolition this week as the city of Luverne paves the way for new housing in that block.

The city of Luverne and Cleveringa Construction have entered into a development agreement for the construction of two triplexes and one twin home on East Barck Avenue.

A tax increment financing district has been established to remove existing substandard buildings on three properties now owned by the city.

"We'll have an open canvas there for new development," City Administrator John Call said at the April 15 City Council meeting.

Water and sewer utilities will be stubbed in to the property line, and the three lots will be conveyed to contractor Merlin Cleveringa as he obtains building permits.

According to discussion at the April 2015 meeting, Cleveringa plans to start construction around mid to late May.

"I have three parties interested in purchasing them," Cleveringa reported to the council.

Chantel Connell photo/0507 barck demolition

By Thursday afternoon there was very little left of the former house on the corner of Barck and Blue Mound avenues. Below, this brick structure on East Barck Avenue was the last to go, in order to prepare the lots for new housing development.

"We'll try to keep costs lower than the Blue Ridge Estates (in the new Manfred Heights Addition). According to surveys, there is a fairly decent demand for that price range."

Over the past year the city has acquired three blighted properties — 509, 501, and 409 E. Barck — "to achieve the goals of eliminating blighted property and to allow for potential residential development in the future," according to LEDA documents.

The city bought the corner lot at 509 E. Barck from John Granneman, Lakeville, for $42,000 in December.

The LEDA bought the brick, commercial-looking structure at 409 E. Barck for $28,000 last summer from Gary Van Regenmorter, doing business as Glatco Partners.

The adjacent property (between that one and the one on the corner) was acquired by the city earlier in 2014 through tax forfeiture. That one, at 501 E. Barck, took up two city lots.

So, the city now owns four contiguous lots on the north side of Barck Avenue, 150 feet deep.

Mayor Pat Baustian said he looks forward to the new subdivision being complete.

"We're excited about your development down there," he said to Cleveringa at the April 16 meeting. "We feel it will fill a need for years to come."

Rebates offered for air conditioner tune-ups

Luverne Municipal Utility is offering a $30 rebate for homeowners who have their central air conditioner or air-source heat pump professionally conditioned.

As part of the service, contractors will clean coils and drains, check the refrigerant charge and belts, and inspect the entire system, including fans.

"Having your cooling system tuned up helps ensure it is working as efficiently as possible, and helps prevent future problems and unexpected costs," said Robyn Wessels, deputy finance clerk for the city of Luverne.

Through its Bright Energy Solutions program, Luverne Municipal Utility offers a variety of cash incentives to customers who install energy-efficient equipment such as central air conditioners and heat pumps, as well as ductless mini-split systems.

Rebates are also available for programmable thermostats, as well as variable speed motors in new furnaces or air handlers.

To learn more about the variety of rebates available to residential and business customers of your hometown utility, call 507-449-2388 or visit www.brightenergysolutions.com.

Bright Energy Solutions is a unique portfolio of energy efficiency cash incentives that help residential and business customers reduce their electric energy costs and operate more efficiently.

The program is offered to customers of participating municipal utilities who are members of Sioux Falls-based Missouri River Energy Services.

"There's always an old farm pickup that someone can drive if they can't figure it out," she said.

The Boyengas are anticipating their triplets' arrival July 1. Driving is a long way in the future for their boy and two girls.

Picking out names will be the Boyengas' first order of business and the Newmans recommend not rhyming or starting their first names with the same letter.

Her triplets, Jamie, Brianna and Kelly, agree, and in an email the trio answered questions about what it is like being a triplet.

"Many people actually don't believe us or they are just shocked," was one remark about being triplets.

They also heard a wide range of comments, but the most frequent has been, "It must be cool being a triplet!" and "Wow, that's so weird." Brianna, Kelly and Jamie are adamant about one aspect of being a trio.

"Even if you meet twins or other multiples, treat them as individuals and don't always group them with their siblings, even if it's easier that way. Please, learn their separate names rather than 'Triplet No. 1, 2 and 3.'"

The Newman girls, now freshmen at Worthington High School, say they are very close and always help each other with homework and

"You are never alone," they shared. "You always have someone else your age to talk to and be around."

Together Kelly, Jamie and Brianna indicated they would celebrate Mother's Day, one that brings three times the joy to mom Gina with "breakfast in bed and a trio of handmade cards."

Triplet births in the U.S. at less than 1 percent

The odds of a woman giving birth to triplets are one in thousand, according to reproductive endocrinologist Dr. Keith Hansen with use of fertility drugs such as Clomid, which helps with female ovulation.

Megan Boyenga said she took Clomid after she was diagnosed with polycystic ovarian syndrome to help with the birth of her second child.

The use of Clomid raises the chance of triplets to 10 percent, Hansen said. Other fertility drugs increase the chance of triplets to 30-40 percent.

Procedures such as in vitro fertilization (IVF), a procedure utilized for the Newman triplets, rarely results in more than twins.

Industry standards now use no more than two embryos for an IVF procedure, Hansen said.

In the United States, there were 4,364 triplet births in 2013, according to the latest data available from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)

The number of twin births was 132,324, also in 2013.

Multiple births have dropped dramatically from its peak in 1998. Since 2004, the average annual declines have been more than 4 percent, the CDC indicated.

Keep or throw?

If toys could talk, I'd have a troubled conscience

The final step in clearing my attic for our new home-owners was removing several Rubbermaid tubs of toys that had survived the keep-or-throw process.

ON SECOND THOUGHT

By Lori Sorenson, editor

he spent a good share of his time safely perched atop the dresser. He didn't get drooled on, spilled on, or taken outside for adventures in the yard.

And, as such, he's been well preserved — and definitely a keeper.

Others weren't so fortunate.

Many stuffed animals are now missing appendages or have matted or stained fur, so those ended up in the throw pile ... along with remote control cars missing wheels and the Hot Wheels racetracks missing pieces of track.

Broken toys were no-brainers; they're garbage. (Trust me, many, many toys were saved as keepers and for Goodwill).

But as I emptied them into the dumpster, I recalled the Disney Pixar animated film, "Toy Story 3."

When Andy turns 17 and packs his things for college, sheer terror strikes the toys in his room as they come to grips with abandonment.

My heart ached for the toys in the movie that were once lovingly played with and were now being stored or thrown away. (Of course, it helped that movie characters could talk and that the sad music made their story even sadder.)

Now I know how Andy feels.

I avoided eye contact with discarded toys that lay strewn across the top of the garbage in our rural dumpster. Their playful colors created an odd contrast to the garbage they had joined.

I was grateful they couldn't talk, but I had a hard time ignoring the sad music in my head.

In 19 years of accumulating toys, we had thrown very few away. Once the boys outgrew them or stopped playing with them, I simply packed them away — usually during one of those cleaning flurries for last-minute guests.

Because the attic was big, and because I was in a hurry, everything got scooped into a container and got tucked away for later sorting.

"Later" arrived two weeks ago when I found myself seated on the attic floor surrounded by toys sorted in "keep" and "throw" piles.

The keepers were easy. If the memories made me smile, they were keepers.

For example, when Jonathan was born, my college friend Molly mailed us a baby gift that arrived in a square package that contained a gift-wrapped box with a Teddy bear inside.

I remember the details of that moment like it was yesterday. Jonathan, an infant, didn't care that a gift had arrived, but for me, receiving a rural mail package from a dear friend in St. Paul made my day.

The bear, with a satin blue ribbon tied in a bow around its neck, was enclosed with a handwritten note congratulating us on Jonathan's arrival. I read that thoughtful message many times over on that sunny afternoon in 1996.

As Jonathan grew and acquired a younger brother, I protected the bear from the rigors of boys' play.

Are backyard poultry flocks at risk?

Deadly avian influenza virus detected in state, counties surrounding Rock County

STAR HERALD EDITORIAL

While the recent avian influenza outbreak poses a low risk to human health and is not a food safety risk, Gov. Mark Dayton declared a state of emergency to stop the spread of the highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI).

The declaration by the state's leader couldn't have come quickly enough.

As of May 5, more than 5 million birds have been euthanized in Minnesota involving 80 farms in 21 different counties. That number is expected to grow.

While Rock County is not home to large commercial chicken or turkey flocks, it is slowly being surrounded by reports of the virus.

Our eastern neighbor, Nobles County, had 21,000 turkeys destroyed due to an outbreak of the avian flu.

Now the Minnesota Department of Animal Health (DAH) suspects a backyard flock of 150 birds in Pipestone County, our northern neighbor, has the virus. Reports of H5N2 in Iowa and South Dakota, our southern and western neighbors, also continue to increase.

All suspected farms remain under quarantine until state and federal officials determine how the virus is spread.

Pipestone County reported the first suspected non-commercial flock with signs of the infestation. The owner noticed unusual death losses and other signs of illness in his/her birds.

We in Rock County need to take notice and take steps to protect our backyard flocks.

Here are some recommendations by the DAH to assist in stopping the spread of the deadly virus.

- Eliminate the opportunity for domestic birds to interact with wild birds. Wild waterfowl are suspected carriers of the disease. The best way to avoid diseases that wildlife carry is to keep domestic animals separated from the wild.

- If you have birds at home, do not visit other farms, homes or facilities that also have birds. If you must visit, shower and change into clean clothes and shoes before and after the visit so you do not transport bird droppings.

- Before you drive down the road, consider where you're going; be sure your vehicle is clean and free of dirt, manure and other organic material that might be transported.

- Be on the alert. Early establishment of a 12-mile control and surveillance zone by state officials can help prevent the spread of the disease.

The University of Minnesota's poultry website contains more information for protecting both urban and backyard flocks. The link can be found at www.extension.umn.edu/agriculture/poultry/avian-influenza.

A hotline number 888-702-9963 is available for general questions about avian influenza and biosecurity measures that can be taken to protect birds.

For sudden onset of sickness or high mortality in any kind or type of poultry flock (commercial or backyard), call a special joint tactical team at 320-214-6700 ext. 3804.

A working horn necessary on all highway vehicles; trailer registration exemptions

Question: I bought a used vehicle and noticed that the horn does not work. Is a person required to have a horn?

Answer: Yes, you are required to have a working horn in the State of Minnesota.

According to Minnesota State Statute, "Every motor vehicle when operated upon a highway must be equipped with a horn in good working order and capable of emitting sound audible under normal conditions from a distance of not less than 200 feet. However, the horn or other warning device must not emit an unreasonably loud or harsh sound or a whistle. The driver of a motor vehicle shall, when reasonably necessary to insure safe operation, give audible warning with the horn, but shall not otherwise use the horn when upon a highway." It also states, "A vehicle must not be equipped with, and a person shall not use upon a vehicle, any siren, whistle, or bell, except as otherwise permitted in this section." (Such as an authorized emergency vehicle - squad car, ambulance, fire truck.)

ASK A TROOPER

By Sgt. Troy Christianson, Minnesota State Patrol

I believe the definition of whistle is quite clear and unreasonably loud or harsh sounds should come down to commonsense and good judgment. When I was in high school, I used an aftermarket Dixie horn to play the General Lee's theme song from our high school football team's car. The car was painted maroon, had a picture of the school mascot and was decorated with all of the football players' names. The horn sounded great at the football field but most certainly would not be legal on public roads.

Question: What is the law with small farm trailers being exempt from registration? A neighbor-friend of mine got ticketed for no Minnesota registration for hauling a lot less weight than that on his farm trailer being pulled with a pickup truck, but he thought he was exempt. He was helping me haul some large, old household items to the dump with it, so I kind of feel partially responsible. Thanks for whatever information you can provide.

Answer: Many types of trailers are exempt from registration, but I am sure that what you are referring to is found in M.S.S. 168.012, Subdivision 2a: "Farm trailers with a gross weight of less than 10,000 pounds, drawn by a passenger automobile or farm truck and used exclusively for transporting agricultural products from farm to farm and to and from the usual marketplace of the owner, shall not be taxed as motor vehicles using the public streets and highways and shall be exempt from the provisions of this chapter."

The reason your neighbor was cited for not having registration is because of the part of the law that says: "... and used exclusively for transporting agricultural products from farm to farm and to and from the usual marketplace of the owner...." Because he was hauling something other than that, he was no longer exempt and had to comply with normal trailer requirements, including registration. The officer probably mentioned this to your friend, who also could have possibly received other violation charges related to the trailer as well.

I hope this information clears it up for you. If anyone is getting cited by an officer for something and you don't understand something about the violation, just ask the officer to clarify the situation for you. A portion of state statutes were used with permission from the Office of the Revisor of Statutes.

Single vehicle rollover

Local emergency responders were dispatched to a single-vehicle crash Friday afternoon near the intersection of 41st Street and 150th Avenue near Ash Creek. According to the accident report, the driver, Linda Hanson, was traveling south in a 1992 Buick Park Avenue when she lost control on the gravel and ran off the road into the south ditch. The incident was reported at nearly 3 p.m. The vehicle rolled over and the driver was taken to the hospital. The report doesn't indicate the extent of her injuries. Hills Fire and Rescue and the Rock County Sheriff's Office assisted at the scene.

Multiple I-90 projects impact local traffic

Interstate 90 travelers are advised of "construction ahead" in southwestern Minnesota as projects begin in May and reach into five counties for the majority of the construction season.
 I-90 traffic will be carried two-way on two lanes; however, construction staging will dictate ramp closures. Motorists are advised to check www.511mn.org before they travel for up-to-date ramp closures and corresponding detours.
 Among the I-90 projects planned this summer is an eastbound concrete overlay between Adrian and Rushmore

 The project will be from June 1 through October, weather permitting.
 Access to Adrian at State Highway 91 will remain open in both directions.
 The Nobles County Road 13 eastbound ramp will be closed, as will the eastbound rest area at Adrian.
 All of this summer's I-90 construction projects can be reviewed at www.

dot.state.mn.us/d7/projects/190preserve/
 Constructed in the 1970s, the I-90 pavements are nearing the end of their service life.
 MnDOT is investing $50 million in savings and $30 million of District 7 funds over the next few years into the rural interstate system to improve performance.
 The $80 million investment will improve 120 miles of some of the poorest interstate pavements and an additional $20 million will be invested to repair the bridges.

four to 12, the students completed tasks that primarily required cleaning, planting, painting or washing.
 One place that received some sprucing up was the Palace Theatre in downtown Luverne.
 "We love having the seniors here," said Diane Ossefort, a member of the Blue Mound Area Theatre. "We appreciate their help."
 Senior Service Day began in the 1990s as Luverne's solution to the state's requirement of adding community service within the high school program, according to Superintendent Gary Fisher, then high school principal.
 "It has been a good thing," he said. "We get a lot of things done around the community."
 Besides the Palace Theatre, students helped out at the Luverne Chamber of Commerce, Luverne Fire Department, Sanford Luverne Hospital, Rock County Opportunities, Blue Mounds State Park, the high school and elementary school, city of Luverne and Mary Jane Brown Home.
 Fisher said anyone can request students to help with projects by contacting the high school office, 283-4491, for next year's service day.

Luverne FCCLA group to participate in national event in Washington, D.C.

Eleven Luverne Middle/High School students attended the Minnesota State FCCLA Conference in Bloomington April 16-18.

The students had the opportunity to hear featured speakers throughout the event to help them become better leaders in their schools and communities.

They also competed in a STAR (Students Taking Action with Recognition) event, and two Luverne students and one LHS group qualified as alternates for the National Conference.

The students included Zoe Brown in Job Interview and Alyssa Kienholz in National Programs in Action.

The group included Zoe Brown, Kat Siebert, Mira Uithoven, and Jenna Schelhaas in Parliamentary Procedure.

Due to another team not being able to attend the National Conference in Parliamentary Procedure, the LHS group will have the opportunity to compete at the National Level in July.

They will be traveling to Washington, D.C., to attend and compete at the National FCCLA Conference.

Body size is not only measured by clothing sizes

Biometric data. Your stats. Your digits. BMI, waist-to-hip ratio, height, weight, body surface area, dress size, pant size, bra size, even IQ. While we're at it, EQ, LDL, HDL, AIC and TSH.

Some of these measurements are familiar to some of you. What are they? They all measure people.

Or do they? I hear many people worrying out loud about different aspects of their health related to their body size. While numbers can help guide us regarding our health, remember that these numbers are only tools for guidance. They do not measure a person. The perfect dress size does not equal perfection, and perhaps a person can indeed be too rich and too thin.

HEALTHY BYTES

By Mary Brown, Sanford Luverne registered nurse health coach

So how does a person gain or maintain health? What is the goal if not a number?

Well, that's a good question that can't answer entirely.

A conversation with your health provider can help you guide your goals. While you're there, ask him or her to take into account your genetics and your personality. Be prepared to discuss not only family and genetic makeup but also family and personal habits. Family history is more than genetics; traditions carried for generations affect the health of the family for generations.

However, each generation gets to "tweak" the tradition a little or a lot.

The most important thing to remember when working to reach your health goals — whether that means bringing your BMI into a healthy range, fitting into a mother-of-the-bride dress, reducing your cholesterol, improving your diabetes or avoiding another heart attack is that the numbers don't define you. They guide you. The numbers are a tool and nothing more.

1922: Businesses gather for bargain day sale

The following appeared in the Rock County Herald on May 5, 1922:

Next Wednesday, May 10th, Will Be Big Bargain Sale Day in Luverne

Sixty-one Business Houses Join in Holding Community Sale Day, All to Offer Special Bargains in Seasonable Merchandise

Sixty-one of the business houses of Luverne have united for the purpose of making next Wednesday, May 10, a community sale day — a day of unexcelled bargains for those who wish to buy.

Almost without exception, each one of the sixty-one business places will quote unusually low prices on at least one article of their stock in trade, and in most instances prices have been slashed deeply on several articles of seasonable demand.

In short, the day will be one when rock-bottom prices prevail on innumerable necessities of life, but to definitely ascertain just how great a saving will be possible to shoppers, one must turn to the double page advertisement which appears elsewhere in this issue and carefully read the uniformly sized announcements in which the different concerns make their bid or patronage.

BITS BY BETTY

By Betty Mann, president Rock County Historical Society

Genuine, money saving prices are the fundamental principle back of the project, and the present plans provide for holding one similar event each month throughout the summer and fall, if the plan proves satisfactory.

In keeping with the plan of having the stores remain open Wednesday evening, which was inaugurated this week, the business places will be open in the evening on Community sale day for the accommodation of those who are not served during the day.

The evening, however, will not be the most advantageous time to profit by the special prices, for this is really arranged for as recreation period, and following the supper hour an open-air concert will be given and a pavement dance held. Matinee picture programs will be shown at both theatres during the afternoon at greatly reduced prices for the entertainment of those who finish their trading early.

But the predominating contention is that it's going to pay for everyone to shop in Luverne next Wednesday.

Mann welcomes correspondence sent to manmade@iu.net

Sanford Luverne purchases telehealth unit with grant from Luverne Area Community Foundation

A grant from the Luverne Area Community Foundation has allowed Sanford Luverne Clinic to purchase a portable telehealth unit for residents at the Good Samaritan Society – Mary Jane Brown Home to access care from the facility.

This unit will enable MJB residents to connect with a physician without leaving the safety and comfort of the nursing home.

Through the use of the telehealth unit, Sanford Luverne hopes to decrease emergency room visits and hospital readmissions, and reduce the stress nursing home residents may experience when being transferred to the clinic or hospital.

"Residents of the Mary Jane Brown Home can now make an appointment to be seen remotely for non-emergency health concerns such as earache, low fever or skin rash," said Laurie Jensen, director of clinic operations at Sanford Luverne.

"Sanford Luverne Clinic staff receive vital signs and assess issues up close through the unit before determining the best course of treatment."

Dr. Zach Nolz (right) and registered nurse Casey Westphal use the telehealth system to see Mary Jane Brown residents (above) electronically from Sanford Luverne.

Good Samaritan Society Director of Nursing Services Hali Reiter said she's looking forward to the health care improvement.

"Telehealth visits will positively impact the resident's quality of life by having their acute medical needs assessed by a physician more quickly and without having to go out to an appointment," Reiter said.

ing the ban to be lifted.

Since then, however, the area received little rainfall, and Rock County is now several inches below normal for the year, according to local weather recorder Troy Thone.

"Since July 2014 (past 10 months) we've received only 8.55 inches of rainfall which is over 10 inches (10.51) below normal," Thone said.

"In looking at our number of days with measurable precipitation, our normal is 82 days and we have received only 60, so we are below normal by 22 days."

His data compares January 2014 through April 2015 to compare and include the June 2014 floods.

"Even after the significant rainfall in June 2014, we are still over 5 inches below normal for the past 16 months, Thone said.

"Days with measurable precipitation is even further below normal by 23 days."

He said the U.S. Drought Monitor has the entire area classified as "D1 — moderate drought."

This is the second worst out of five drought classifications. D4 is "exceptional drought" and D0 is "abnormally dry."

"So it goes without saying that conditions are extremely dry," Thone said

The Drought Monitor describes D1 level impacts as "Some damage to crops, pastures; streams, reservoirs, or wells low, some water shortages developing or imminent; voluntary water-use restrictions requested."

Controlled burn gets out of control near church

By Lori Sorenson

Members of the Luverne Fire Department responded to a grass fire west of Luverne Thursday morning, April 30.

The fire started west of the First Assemblies of God Church along the north side of County Road 4 around 11 a.m.

The fire appeared to be spreading toward the northwest across a field of corn stubble, but it didn't appear that any structures were damaged.

According to Luverne Fire Chief David Van Batavia, the owner of the property, the church pastor, had been burning tall grass in a wetland near the property line.

Landowners reminded of CRP rules, compliance

Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) participants must properly maintain acres enrolled in CRP throughout the contract period.

The Farm Service Agency encourages participants to regularly visit and evaluate the condition of the CRP acreage to ensure the vegetative cover and conservation practice are properly maintained to adequately control erosion, protect air and water quality and enhance wildlife habitat, as agreed to in the approved CPO.

CRP contract participants are required to control undesirable weeds, invasive plants, insects, pests and rodents on the entire CRP acreage covered by the CPO, as determined by the FSA County Committee (COC).

Participant awareness of the condition of CRP acreage is crucial to remaining in compliance with CRP regulations. Failure to adequately maintain CRP acreage may result in a compliance violation and payment reduction.

CRP maintenance activities may be conducted without FSA approval anytime outside the established primary nesting and brood-rearing season from May 15 through Aug. 1.

However, spot treatment of specific areas in critical need of maintenance may be conducted at any time with prior approval from FSA. To request approval, contact the Rock County FSA Office, 283-2369.

Furthermore, don't forget to annually certify all CRP acreage with FSA prior to the July 15 deadline; and also notify FSA of any changes that may affect CRP payment eligibility, such as transfer of ownership.

God's love remains

“[Christ] has abolished the law with its commandments and ordinances, that he might create in himself one new humanity in place of the two, thus making peace, and might reconcile both groups to God in one body through the cross.” Ephesians 2:15-16

Joseph Sittler, a Lutheran theologian, once told this story about the symbol of the cross. Sittler was at a conference, which was being held at a convent. Every day he walked by the chapel and saw the nuns at prayer, gazing at the large cross that hung over the altar. This made him stop and wonder: “Is there any other image in the history of the world that could survive such constant gazing, reflection and prayer? What other form could absorb all of the worries and apprehensions heaped upon it? Is there any other image in the world that could stand the weight of so profound a demand? And the answer was immediate and obvious: ‘No.’” (Gravity and Grace, Augsburg Fortress, 2005, p 21)

The cross has always been a central symbol in our Christian faith. I think that its staying power is because of the tremendous power that it has. It has the power to forgive sins. It has the power to show us God's unending love. And it has the power to unite. Paul tells us in Ephesians that the cross of Christ has made us one, breaking down all barriers that had once been there. Before God we are all people of the cross.

BUILT ON A ROCK

By Josh Anderson, Grace Lutheran Church, Luverne

There are many images that we try and replace the cross with, images that we think will be able to take on our pain and replace the cross. So we begin to gaze at these new symbols and begin to heap all of our worries and pains on them. But we quickly learn that these new symbols just don't work. Soon the symbols fall apart and we are left alone once again, with all of our worries and apprehensions sitting in our lap. But God's love and grace, as symbolized in the cross, always remain and are always there to take on our cares once again.

Amid all of the changes in life, we can take heart that we have an anchor in this one symbol. At the center of our church lies this one symbol, our defining symbol: a symbol of the love of God; a symbol of the grace of God; a symbol of the promise of God. We find the cross of Christ there to take on our anxieties and fears. We find the cross of Christ there to remind us that, despite all of the barriers that life puts up (fear, busyness, etc.), God is there to remind us of the peace and love that Christ offers.

What can you do that will help you remember that God's love and peace are always in the midst of your life?
