Six Luverne students make appearance at state speech tournament

By Mavis Fodness

A year after the coronavirus pandemic canceled their 2020 state tournament, Luverne speech students returned with a vengeance, winning the Section 3A Speech Championship and qualifying six for Saturday's state meet.

To celebrate their achievements Friday, speech team members climbed into the Luverne Trolley and followed the Luverne Volunteer Fire Department trucks through town.

They included seniors and team captains Josie Golla and Xavier Carbonneau, juniors Luke Thorson and Chance Tunnissen, sophomore Parker Carbonneau, and seventh-grader Zander Carbonneau.

The escort has become a community tradition to send students off to tournaments in the Twin Cities and to join other speech qualifiers of Class A at in-person state tournaments.

However, the Luverne students never left town Friday. Instead they competed the next day from the familiar surroundings of Luverne High School in a virtual competition using Zoom.

The 2021 speech season was completed through recordings and later through Zoom at the local high schools due to the continuing coronavirus pandemic.

First-time state speech participant Golla said the classroom setting suited her well for competition.

"It's what we have done every week ... in the same room all season ... so we are comfortable in the room," she said. "It's been really nice to have the consistent focal points and where to go."

Golla has competed in speech since the seventh grade.

"This is only the second time competing in the section tournament so I was not expecting to go on to state with this," she said. "It's very nice to know my hard work has paid off and I get to go to the state tournament."

The 2021 tournament is also Thorson's first state appearance in his four years on the team.

"It feels like a big achievement," he said. "I came close in my eighth-grade year, I got sixth in sections so I was only three slots out. It was a big blow. Then I came back this year because last year was gone."

Pandemic prom plans

Outdoor grand march on deck for Luverne High School prom

By Mavis Fodness

Weather will determine public viewing of Luverne High School prom grand march on Saturday.

At their April 22 School Board meeting, district officials released plans that included an outdoor grand march to accommodate the in-person viewing demand.

High school principal Ryan Johnson outlined Saturday's activities, which are scheduled from 5 to 11:30 p.m. at the school.

The grand march is planned for 5 p.m. Saturday.

Johnson outlined how the grand march will look in a letter addressed to parents.

"As couples start their walk, they will come out of the front canopy doors and make their way to a presentation spot just outside the side gym doors (voting doors)," Johnson said

"From there, our speakers will announce the names, officially presenting them to the crowd. They will then make their way north to the weight room doors, stopping along the way for patrons to congratulate them and take pictures."

Roped-off areas will designate the grand march path. Bleachers are available for spectator seating.

A livestream of the grand march will be on the Luverne Middle School/High School Facebook page.

If weather conditions are unfavorable, the grand march will be inside with no spectators. The livestream is also planned if the weather alternative is necessary.

Current weather forecasts predict highs in the 80s with no precipitation.

School Board members supported Johnson's plans.

"It's something new and unique for students to experience and say 'They were the first to do it," Johnson said.

While students participating in the grand march will not wear masks outside, masks are recommended for those watching the march.

Spectator parking is designated in the south student parking

The grand march is scheduled to end by 6 p.m., when students transition to after-prom festivities in the elementary school.

Students will rotate through six areas that include games, food and an outdoor fire pit.

Social distancing and mask requirements will be followed.

All prom activities end at 11:30 p.m.

"Whenever you can give students experiences that allow them to make a community better, it is a win for the community and the person serving," said Secondary Principal Andrew Kellenberger.

Other students cleaned the grounds around the Hugo Goehle gym and Tuff Memorial Home. Seniors walked Highway 270, their Adopt-a-Highway project, which staff completed last year due to distance learning created by the coronavirus pandemic. Elementary students in Beaver Creek also cleaned the grounds around the school.

ATLAS Ministries stretches out in new location

By Lori Sorenson

Two months ago, the former Luverne Kawasaki building was a flurry of sheet rock dust and paint primer.

Now, the newly remodeled building is home to ATLAS Ministry Center, home of Redeemed Remnants secondhand store, Rock County ATLAS for Life, and their related causes and ministries.

Among them are New Life Celebration Church, the food ministry and more.

Since the April 15 ribboncutting celebration, the location has been abuzz with workers, shoppers, donors, worshippers and others coming and going from the large parking lot and adjacent alley.

Mostly, organizers are pleased to be turning over merchandise and making a profit — to the tune of roughly $1,000 per day.

In the former Redeemed Remnants location on East Main Street, $500 day was a good day, according to ATLAS Board president Brenda Winter.

"That was the whole goal," she said, "to have a place for people to bring things, a place for people get things and to support ATLAS."

Brothers compete at state speech meet

Senior Xavier, sophomore Parker and seventhgrader Zander relied on each other for motivation to do well this virtual season.

Due to the categories they compete in, they sit together during the drawing of their speech topics as well as during breaks between rounds.

Xavier competes in storytelling; Parker and Zander in extemporaneous speaking. Between rounds the brothers would sit together before the next draw event was announced.

Parents Michael and Molly Carbonneau know their sons are competitive.

"When they play board games, the competition runs deep," Molly said.

She also sees a support-

Xavier led the Carbonneau brothers into speech, joining the team six years ago. The activity then caught Parker's attention.

"When Xavier first started, he always seemed excited whenever he got back from a speech meet," Parker recalled. "I thought that sounded kind of fun so I tried it." This will be the only year the three Carbonneau brothers will be on the speech team together.

However, for the next decade, at least two brothers could be on the team. Youngest brother, Oliver, is a third grader. "It will be a while but he will be here eventually," Xavier Molly said she did have some initial concerns about all three of her sons competing together but in individual events.

"I, at times, was worried if one person would do better than the other," she said. "But in the end, they genuinely seem happy for the other child."

She credits coaches Thorson and Folkestad for the tone set within the speech team.

"I think the comradery of speech, even if you're not brothers, is priceless," Molly said. "These coaches really teach the older speech members to lead the younger."

Tunnissen places seventh in tight state speech competition

By Mavis Fodness

Junior Chance Tunnissen was the sole medal earner from Luverne High School during Saturday's Minnesota State Speech Tournament.

Competing virtually, Tunnissen was selected by judges for the finals, which comprise the top eight students in each of the 13 speech categories.

Also competing in Saturday's event from LHS but not competing in the final rounds were first-time state participants Josie Golla, Xavier Carbonneau, Luke Thorson, Parker Carbonneau and Zander Carbonneau.

"State is very tough," said coach Caroline Thorson. "Especially for firsttime participants, even though they did compete at ous interpretation and competing virtually has giving him a learning curve.

"It is not quite the same as being in person because things seem a bit funnier in person actually," he said. "Now I can say this line and I can look at the lamp in the back of the room because it has the best angle to see my facial expressions. That's a good thing.

Xavier Carbonneau broke a personal trend at the section tournament, where the top three students in each of the categories are able to move on to the state meet. Saturday was his first and only state speech meet.

"I feel accomplished," he said. "I've gotten fourth a lot of years so it is nice to finally break that trend."

This year is Xavier's sixth year on the team and he admits the speech experience is different this year since he and his teammates didn't travel on buses to other schools, mingle and become friends with other students, which is different this year with no in-person tournaments.

"They are just competitors not actual people and friends," he said.

For first-year speech student Zander Carbonneau, virtual is the only way he's participated in speech and the extemporaneous speaking category.

"Some things are nice and some things are harder like at some meets we are allowed to use the internet now," he said. "You can wear what you want because you only see yourself from the waist up so you can wear tennis shoes instead of dress shoes."

Humor is something junior and three-time state qualifier Chance Tunnissen has also incorporated into his extemporaneous speaking performances.

"I think judges like that and also not using a notecard," Tunnissen said. "I have been trying to give my speeches memorized - sometimes it makes it worse when you trip up but I've tried to run through it." As the seasoned veteran on the team, Tunnissen has taken brothers Zander and Parker Carbonneau under his wing. All three compete in extemporaneous speaking, and the topics are drawn the day of the meet with 30 minutes to prepare a recommended 7-minute speech.

"The big thing is just confidence. ... If you sound like vou know what vou are talking about, you'll do good," Tunnissen said.

That confidence was presented last year when sophomore Parker Carbonneau started his fourth year on the speech team. He met a goal by qualifying for Saturday's virtual state speech tournament.

"It's pretty exciting," he said. "Last year I was hoping to make it to state but the season got cut short. I know we are really not going there but it is pretty exciting to be at a live where I know I can finally make it to state."

Retired member appointed to fill H-BC School Board vacancy

By Mavis Fodness

Former board member Harley Fransman was unanimously appointed to the Hills-Beaver Creek School Board during Monday night's meeting.

Fransman served 13 years on the H-BC Board, retiring in 2018. He served six years as the board's chairman and was instrumental in bringing the district out of statutory operating debt.

Fransman replaces Dan LaRock, who resigned his position on the board earlier this month.

Fransman will join the board May 26. The public has 30 days from Monday's board resolution adoption to challenge the appointment.

Fransman will serve until the November general election. The position will then be open for any eligible resident to file for election to complete the last year of the four-year term, which expires in 2022.

In other business, board members:

•approved adding a fulltime elementary teacher for the 2021-2022 school year. Estimated salary is $55,000.

•agreed to join eight to 10 other southwest Minnesota school districts in splitting lawyer fees to answer the Minnesota State High School League's continued requests to replace lost revenue through a second payment to the organiza-

H-BC passed a resolution in December to pay a portion of the requested $4,317 or $28.22 per student. Instead, H-BC paid $1,707 or $11.16 per high school student. H-BC has 104 high school students.

"It's a matter of fairness and how these fees were put out there," Superintendent Holthaus said.

One teen vandal pays restitution, joins military

By Lori Sorenson

Vandalism cases against local teenagers are proceeding through juvenile court, with one defendant paying his share of restitution and now in military basic training.

According to the Rock County Attorney's Office, Gavyn Boll, 17, paid roughly $1,500 in restitution to be divided among the victims.

Some of Boll's charges were dismissed as part of that negotiation, said David Owens, assistant county attorney.

"To proceed with those charges against Mr. Boll with the new information received would not have been in the best interests of justice," he said.

Boll participated in a string of vandalisms with fellow teen Elliot Stoltenberg, who faces both vandalism and felony assault charges.

The boys, along with two younger juveniles, admitted to destroying property in Luverne City Park when it was decorated with lighted holiday displays.

The criminal complaints outline more than a dozen counts of vandalism in varying degrees and assaults that took place in and around the city of Luverne between December 2020 and February 2021.

The assault charges stem from the use of airgun style, CO2 powered automatic pistols that were used to shoot at individuals. At least one incident involved shooting at a pedes-described in damage to property, much of which involved shooting out windows.

The complaint outlines more than a dozen separate incidents of Luverne residents and business owners reporting damage to vehicles or property by a BB-gun style weapon.

edly admitted to one or more of the vandalisms and implicated other juveniles.

Boll left Monday for U.S. Marine Corps basic training in San Diego, California, and Owens said this military experience is factored into legal penalties.

"Most were in agreement that the USMC basic training would be more onerous and rehabilitative than juvenile probation," Owens said.

"It is my understanding that a drill sergeant, when their craft is applied appropriately, tends to 'rehabilitate' people quite well."

He said the consensus was also that the courts would rather not discourage someone from serving in the military when they admit to wrongdoing.

Owens said the cases involving the other juveniles are still in negotiation, and it's unclear whether any will proceed to trial.

Ranger rolls over Saturday

Local first responders were dispatched to a roll-over accident Saturday afternoon on South Highway 75 near the Verne Drive-In.

According to the Rock County Sheriff's Office, a 2018 Polaris Ranger was northbound from the city tree dump when a gust of wind blew open the door.

The driver, Kyle Remme, reportedly swerved in response, causing the vehicle to flip over on the shoulder of the road, pinning his leg underneath. He was taken by ambulance to the emergency room where he was treated for nonlife-threatening injuries.

The Luverne Fire Department and Minnesota State Patrol assisted at the scene.

More space means more profit to benefit ATLAS

The 10,000-squarefoot Kawasaki building is an improvement over the store's previous 2,300-square foot space downtown primarily because there is more space for larger, higherdollar items like furniture and appliances.

A typical month's profit in the former space was $10,000.

"Last month we made $14,000, and we were closed for a week," Winter said.

She points to the spacious back room where volunteers sort donations. The good, gently used items get sent on to volunteers who get them ready for sale.

of donations and sales is dizzying. "They get things put away, and five more bags come in," she said. "The cool stuff is in and out in minutes." Store manager Greg Hoogeveen has worked with Redeemed Remnants for three years and said the past few months have been a whirlwind.

"It keeps growing," he said. "It's really taken off."

He said he enjoys seeing community generosity and selling items to benefit ATLAS.

"We get anything and everything," he said, pointing out used high school sporting goods, home electronics, decor and furniture.

When asked if he had anything in stock that was particularly intriguing, he headed toward an aisle with a vintage steamer trunk and stopped.

"Oh. I guess we sold it," he smiled.

To price things he's not familiar with, Hoogeveen said he checks Google, eBay, Etsy and other sites.

Some unique items he sells directly online to get a better price from a wider range of shoppers.

Adjacent to the Redeemed Remnants store space is a worship area leased to New Life Celebration Church. The extra space also serves as office areas for ATLAS staff and volunteers and also community spaces available for rent.

Greg Hoogeveen is the store manager for Redeemed Remnants.

When he gets a chance, he shares images of new items for sale on the Redeemed Remnants Facebook page.

Also, he encourages people to call if they questions about how to donate. The number is 507-449-

All donations are accepted at the Redeemed Remnants alley doors toward the east end of the alley on the north side of the building.

"A year ago we were in a pandemic, and to even think that we'd have this store only a year later ... to financially be able to do it. Everything is amazing."

- Greg Hoogeveen, Redeemed Remnants store manager

'Meant to be'

Hoogeveen said he enjoys the work and the satisfaction of dealing with generous people and seeing the store help ATLAS and its missions.

Lately, he said he's just in awe of the progress made in a short period of time.

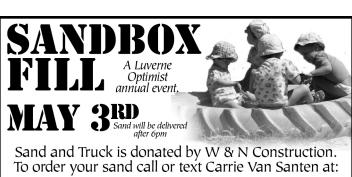

"A year ago we were in a pandemic, and to even think that we'd have this store only a year later ... to financially be able to do it," Hoogeveen said. "Everything is amazing."

He said he and ATLAS staff and board members prayed about the big decisions to sell the other building and buy the Kawasaki building, and it's been reaffirming to measure the success.

"We had so many good things happen, it's all just pointing in the direction that we've done the right thing," he said.

"When we were building in here, it worked. It was amazing. With this and the volunteers, there's so much support. It was meant to be."

Life's influences come from the people we meet

A forgotten influence recently came to mind with the news of Walter Mondale's death. The memory took me back to Augustana College as an 18-year-old freshman. The 1984 presidential campaign featured Democratic presidential candidate Mondale, and I was one of a small group of Young Democrats on campus.

Like me, he was a Minnesota native, and my political leanings were beginning to take root in his Democratic ideals.

Through the years I have voted for Democrats, Republicans and Independents. It's the person that draws my attention and how he or she intends to move the nation forward.

I met Mondale in person a couple of years ago at the 2016 Minnesota Newspaper Association Convention. I shook his hand and told him of his influence in my political thinking. Ever so gracious, he thanked me for my support all those years ago and encouraged my continued input into community journalism.

I wrote about that meeting in a 2016 column. I recall him stating that it's the business of newspapers to ask questions and form public Politics and public opinions today are very divisive. It's also "your view is wrong," and no solutions or common ground is ever established.

Mondale famously asked "Where's the beef?" in the 1984 presidential nomination debate. In essence, he asked his Democratic opponents to stop with the BS and bring legitimate ideas to the table for discussion. The sentiment still applies today. "Where's the beef?" Where are the solutions we can discuss?

I will miss Mondale and those like him in politics today who graciously model what public service and private behavior should be.

In his memoir, "A Good Fight," he wrote about his confidence that government could be used to better people's lives, even though it appears that others don't share the same philosophy. "My faith has not dimmed. But I also came to understand that voters didn't simply put us in office to write laws or correct the wrongs of the moment. They were asking us to safeguard the remarkable nation our founders left us and leave it better for our children."

We should all strive to think and act more like Mondale.

Stop waiting for someone else to do it

We can learn from area students who embraced spirit of Earth Day

Youthful exuberance was palpable Friday as Hills-Beaver Creek Secondary students exited the school bus at the Hills Rez Park.

They were laughing, running after each other and just plain excited to be outdoors. The change of scenery, however, didn't mean they weren't learning.

Last Thursday was Earth Day, a day to protect the environment and focus on conservation.

Our prairie landscape needs to be protected, appreciated and recognized for the mental renewal offered in the fresh outdoor air.

Unfortunately, not all kids in the U.S. are able to have that experience, because green areas in some urban areas are just not there — the land is needed for housing, streets, commercial buildings, everything that makes up a big city.

Here in Rock County, however, we are happy to see our students embracing what living in a rural area can offer.

Last week the Star Herald published a story about the new seed library offered through the Rock County Library.

STAR HERALD EDITORIAL

Even though we are surrounded by acres of corn and soybeans, Rock County is, by definition, a "food desert."

Being a food desert means the majority of our residents are not within walking distance of a grocery store with fresh fruits and vegetables, the building blocks to a healthier lifestyle. Instead, processed, inexpensive foods can easily be purchased, but these foods are not good for our health.

The seed library allows patrons to start their own gardens, to grow their own fruits and vegetables.

Along with the free seeds, the library has reference materials available to show how gardening is done.

If reading is not to your liking, the library can connect patrons to people who will eagerly help start gardens in a backyard or even in containers that don't take up much

One of the H-BC students cleaning at the Rez stated, "There are a lot of food wrappers out here."

One simple way to help the environment is "picking up after

Last fall the guest speaker at Luverne High School's National Honor Society induction said his mentor would pick up garbage from the ground.

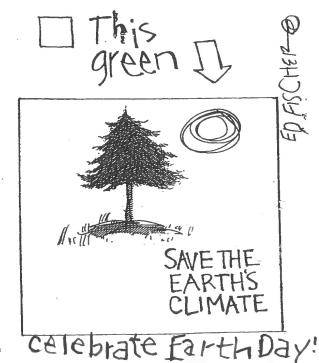

He stated he wasn't going to wait for someone else to clean up the community. He was going to just do it.

We also need to just do it.

When you see an errant food wrapper, plastic bottle and other garbage on the ground, don't just walk by — pick it up and dispose of the litter properly.

Let's keep our communities clean and enjoyable for decades to come.

Reduce risks of motorcycle crash with three simple steps

Question: Can you talk about motorcycle safety going into spring riding?

Answer: With everything going on in the world today, a motorcycle ride can be the perfect escape. Leave your worries behind, put that helmet on, and head for the open road. Here are steps you can take to reduce your risk of crashing:

•Ride sober.

•Wear highly visible protective gear, including a brightly colored helmet.

• Have a good riding strategy for every ride. Wearing proper protective gear can help keep you safe in case of a crash, but having good riding skills can prevent a crash from happening in the first place.

Motorcycle training is a great way to develop and improve safe riding skills, but time is running out to register for the Basic Rider Course (BRC) to earn your endorsement. More than 1,300 riders took the BRC in the first two months of the training season, which started the first week of June, and nearly 300 more riders took other MMSC training courses. Register

Sasker: 'Glad to call Luverne home'

To the Editor:

I wrote a letter to the editor years ago and never sent it.

This is that letter in part:

It happened again like so many times before. I am in a store in Luverne and I hear a clerk refer a customer to another store because they didn't have the item asked for.

I am a transplant to Luverne and I love it here. This is one of the reasons I am glad to call Luverne home.

Apportionment is the process of distributing representatives (or seats) in the U.S. House of Representatives among the 50 states based on the apportionment population counts from the decennial census. Population per representative is calculated by dividing the apportionment population count by the number of representatives.

First census data show Minnesota keeps its eight congressional seats

On Monday the U.S. Census Bureau released the first population data from Census 2020, showing that Minnesota grew enough to hold on to all eight of its congressional seats.

The state's population grew by 7.6 percent to 5,706,494, outpacing most Midwestern states and keeping pace with the national average.

The nationwide head count showed that the country's population on April 1, 2020, was 331,449,281, up from 308,745,538 in 2010, for a 7.4 percent increase.

"I want to thank Minnesotans for their nation-leading civic engagement, which made us the No. 1 state in responding to the census," said Governor Tim Walz.

"Because of that participation, we will be fully represented in Washington and will have access to federal resources we need to improve our infrastructure, fund our schools, and support our health care system.'

Minnesota hung on to the 435th seat in Congress by a close margin — less than 1,000 people.

Keeping all eight representatives in the U.S. House means maintaining the clout that helps bring home federal funding for schools, highways, and health

"Losing one district would have been a serious blow to the state," said Susan Brower, state demographer.

"Had Minnesota lost that seat, each of the remaining seven districts would have had to grow by 102,000 people, setting off a complex realignment or redistricting of the state's political map."

She said the impact in greater Minnesota where the districts are already quite large would have been especially difficult.

Minnesota led the nation in self-response to the census, with 75.1 percent of households returning their census form without additional follow-up from a census

Efforts by governments, nonprofit groups, and advocates ensured that residents that are typically undercounted, like college students, the homeless, apartment dwellers, snowbirds, rural areas, and black, indigenous, and people of color were motivated to fill out their census forms.

"Our great self-response rate gave Minnesota an edge over other states that didn't respond as thoroughly," said Brower.

"Minnesotans are historically very civically engaged, and that carried through to their participation in the 2020 Census."

States losing one seat in Congress included California, Illinois, Michigan, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

States gaining one or more seats in Congress included Colorado, Florida, Montana, North Carolina, Oregon and Texas (+2).

Block level census data that are used in the redistricting process to create new map boundaries for congressional and state legislative districts will be released in August 2021.

Kindergarten through fifthgrade students at Hills-Beaver Creek Elementary School raised nearly $6,000 in a fundraiser organized by the Parent-Teacher Association.

The walk-a-thon accepted pledges from March 30 through April 8, and students completed the walk-a-thon on April 9.

This is the second year for the

At Saturday's state meet, he did just that, taking seventh place in extemporaneous speaking.

"A lot of time (my) extemp is trying to present really boring information in a really funny, digestible way," he said. "I have always been a big fan, more than other people, of funny intros."

Tunnissen frequently cited song lyrics such as Jason Aldean's "Big Green Tractor" this season. He recently added lyrics from rapper Snoop Dog to the ideal speech length of seven minutes.

Each extemporaneous speech includes an introduction, three major topic points and a formed conclusion.

Caroline Thorson coaches the LHS speech team with adviser Gavin Folkestad.

"Kids in speech have to be self-motivators," she said.

The white board in Thorson's classroom was filled with extemporaneous speaking topics and speaking points this week, as Tunnissen and sophomore Parker Carbonneau and Zander Carbonneau prepared for the state competition.

Tunnissen is passing on the knowledge he gained from other student mentors, LHS graduates Dylan Thorson and Shane Berning, who both medaled at previous state tournaments in extemporaneous speaking.

From experience Tunnissen knew coming into the state competition that judges pay attention to more than a funny introduction.

"At the state level, the judges are looking at the content," he said. "The judges really know the topics and you really have to know your sources and stuff."

Tunnissen said he is proud the LHS team claimed the top three extemporaneous speaking placings for the Section 3A speech championship.

"We've always had at least two," he said. "This is the first year with three."

Changing of the banners

Crews with the city of Luverne spent two days last week updating the banners along Highway 75 and Main Street. Annie Opitz with Quality Printing, Luverne, served on the committee that selected the pictures for the 16 different depictions of local residents enjoying city amenities, honoring veterans and highlighting the health care community, the school and the state park. This year's design has the picture printed on both banners that hang on a single light pole.

Left: City crews also hung 91 banners honoring Luverne High School's Class of 2021 along each side of Main Street. Opitz said parent boosters sponsored the cost of the graduation banners what will hang on the light pole into the fall. Graduates will be able to keep their banners after removal.

REMEMBER WHEN

10 years ago (2011)

•The year was 1962 when three teenagers from Pipestone and Luverne formed a group called The Starflies.

They were lead singer and guitarist Steve Ellis, Pipestone, drummer Butch Hatting and guitarist Jim Brandenburg, both of Luverne.

The band was widely known in its day, and on April 16 it was inducted into the South Dakota Rock and Roll Music Association Hall of Fame.

Hatting — who still lives in Luverne and who still plays drums — is the only one of the original three Starflies who was available to accept the honor on behalf of the band in Sioux Falls. ... Brandenburg was unable to attend the induction, but he told the Star Herald he wishes he could have been there. ...

Ellis died in a motorcycle accident in 1967, and the Starflies group members included other band members who came and went.

Several of those musicians attended the ceremony and were able to perform some Starflies numbers on stage. That included bass guitarist Mike Mulligan, Luverne, who joined the group in later years.

For two days, they shaped and fired pots. With two tophat kilns going in the backyard of the Center, the group completed nearly 60 posts by Saturday evening and enjoyed the social aspects of shared meals and work.

Michael Hill, an art instructor at the University of South Dakota, Vermillion, demonstrated the Raku process and helped participants remove glowing pots from the kiln and manipulate flames to achieve just the right desired effect.

The Rock County Fine Arts Association, which sponsors the event, is already planning a fourth Raku Madness in 1997.

Early planting is essential for starting strawberry patch

Our spring weather certainly has been unstable this year. I don't understand how a tulip flower stem can survive 16 degrees and still stand firm and continue on to a beautiful flower.

My blooming daffodils didn't come through the cold as well. The leaves are still green so they can feed the bulb to develop the flower for next year.

That is why we stress the importance of leaving the leaves of spring-flowering bulbs intact until they turn yellow. Those weeks between flowering and the foliage maturing and drying down is when the flower bud is forming in the bulb for the next season.

That is the tricky part of cutting tulips for cut flowers. Often the stem of the flower isn't very tall, but you don't want to cut more than one leaf with the flower because of the needed energy produced by the foliage to replenish the bulb.

For the cut flower market, the bulb is disposed of after the flower is produced. But in our garden, we want the bulbs to keep blooming for consecutive years.

I am writing this on Sunday night. We have had cold wind, rain and snow today, but tomorrow is predicted to be warm in comparison to the previous weeks. So, tomorrow I will be in the garden planting as fast as I can because rain is predicted for Tuesday, and the 15-day forecast doesn't show any below freezing temperatures. That doesn't mean planting tomatoes, peppers or any of the tender plants. The soil temperature isn't warm enough for that at this point. The crops I will plant are the cole crops like cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, kohlrabi, and lettuce, peas, carrots radish, spinach, beets and onions. These vegetables all benefit from getting started while the soil temperature is cool.

If you are hoping to get a strawberry patch started, early planting is essential, especially if you are planting bare root plants (dormant plants not growing in a container).

You have the choice of Junebearing, which produce for a couple of weeks in late June, or ever-bearing, which produce a crop in late June, take the month of July off and then start yielding again in August. They will continue blooming and producing until it gets too cold in the fall.

The ever-bearing variety I grow is Seascape. I grow that one because I appreciate fresh for as long as possible for the season. They definitely are more work because you absolutely have to keep harvesting to avoid damage from insects that are attracted by overripe fruit.

Spotted Wing Drosophila is a fruit fly pest in our area, and strawberries are one of their favorites. The June-bearing varieties are usually finished before the insect population becomes a problem.

If the season is hot and dry, strawberries need an inch of water per week to produce good fruit. If you need to irrigate, NEVER water overhead with a sprinkler. That is the surest way to invite disease that will ruin the fruit. Rain is different in that it usually doesn't last long; however, a prolonged period of rain will cause the same problem.

Hope you are getting outdoors in the morning to hear the bird choir practicing ... absolutely amazing.

OBITUARIES

Roger Achterhof

Roger Dale Achterhof, 80, Rochester, died peacefully at his home April 26, 2021, enveloped in the love of family and caregivers from Visiting Angels and Mayo Clinic Hospice.

Tipping the scales at 12.5 pounds, he was born at home July 18, 1940, in Sioux Center, Iowa, to L.W. (Lawrence) and Jeanetta (Jean) Achterhof. At birth he inherited his father's indomitable work ethic and business acumen and his mother's loving kindness and caring, gentle nature.

Roger entered the business world when he began delivering the Sioux City Journal in his hometown at age eight. Two years later he heard about a commercial popcorn machine lying dormant in the basement of a local store. After youthful negotiating, he purchased the machine for $10 from his newspaper delivery profits. He riggedup a portable popcorn stand and hired his brother and his friends as vendors. Roger's popcorn stand and enticing aroma of freshly popped corn became a fixture at the town's Saturday shopping nights, outdoor summer band concerts in the park and county fair. With the proceeds from his popcorn stand, which continued through high school, 15-year-old Roger and his 12-year-old brother, Doug, had an A&W drive-in restaurant built on the highway through town. He also secured a loan, co-signed by his father, through a local bank. The drive-in, open from spring through fall, was sold in 1961 and paid for the boys' college educations.

Life wasn't all work and no play. Before he graduated from Sioux Center High School in 1958, Roger had attained the Eagle Scout and Order of the Arrow Honors in the Boy Scouts. He also served as a Boy Scout camp counselor at Okoboji, Iowa, for two years, was a lifeguard and swimming instructor at Sandy Hollow, the town's swimming spot. In high school he served in student government and played varsity basketball. He was a multi-tasker before it became a catch-phrase.

> He graduated from Hope College in Holland, Michigan, June 4, 1962. On that same day, he married Carole Risselada, who was a sophomore at Hope. His lifetime laugh line was, "I received my bachelor's degree in the morning and lost it at night." While in college Roger was active in class presidencies, Phi Kappa Alpha and his double majors in chemistry and biology. The couple moved to the University of Iowa, where Roger did graduate studies in chemistry for two years, after which he was recruited by Lederle Laboratories as a pharmaceutical representative in Duluth, Minnesota. While there from 1964-1968 Roger savored life: the births of two daughters, his work as a Boy Scout leader and recipient of the Silver Scout Award, and his pursuits of hunting, fishing and golf.

In 1968 Roger became part-owner and manager of Luverne Dehydrated Products, an ag-business which converted alfalfa into pellets for livestock feed in Luverne, Minnesota. After a short time, the couple had two more daughters and bought a farm with a 100-year-old farmhouse, living there from 1974-1987. Roger earned his private pilot license and coowned a Cessna. He became active in Green Earth Players, a community theater group, and served as president and board member of the Southwest MN Arts and Humanities Council. His favorite pastimes were farming, flying, golfing and hunting deer in Wyoming with his brother and father.

While the couple lived Luverne, their second daughter, Linda, endured many neurosurgeries. They lost their fourth daughter, Kate, 7, to cancer in 1980 and their third daughter, Marta, sustained a traumatic brain injury in a one-car accident in 1987. After coming out of a two-year coma, she came home to live. Throughout all of these crises, Roger was a rock. He sold Luverne Dehy in 1984 and started FGL Commodities Brokerage in Luverne. The business thrived and was sold in 2002 when Roger retired.

Roger, Carole and Marta moved permanently to their summer home on Little Spirit Lake, Jackson County, Minnesota, in 1994. Roger's outside interests then were focused on fishing, golfing and traveling. Until Covid-19 hit in early 2020, the couple traveled extensively to North America, Central America, Europe, the Caribbean, and a side trip to Africa. They golfed whenever possible and relished every adventure they shared together. In 2015 the threesome moved to Rochester, primarily in hopes of living closer to Mayo Clinic, which Roger frequented often, and also finding a new permanent home for Marta, which was happily realized.

Roger is preceded in death by his daughter, Kate, his parents and his sister, DeeDee Kock.

Survivors include his wife of 58 years, Carole; three daughters, Kristin Achterhof (Glenn Ronaldson), Hinsdale, Illinois, Linda Davis (Jim), Rochester, Marta Achterhof, Rochester. His grandchildren; Sidney Davis, Boston, MA, Rutger and Landon Ronaldson, Hinsdale, IL. He is also survived by a brother, Douglas Achterhof (Karen), Sheridan, WY, and sister, Beverly Rohl, Rapid City, South Dakota.

All who knew Roger will miss him dearly.

A private memorial service will be held in June.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be sent to Mayo Clinic Hospice, phone number: 507-284-2264, or you can make a donation online by visiting: philanthropy. mayoclinic.org, in memory of Roger Achterhof, designating/ supporting the hospice care team.

"Most of our games could have gone either way in the win-loss column," Luverne head coach Mike Wenninger said.

"Teams are very competitive and for the most part equal in talent. We have struggled defensively, which will catch up with us if we don't work to improve."

In St. James on Thursday, April 22, the Cardinals defeated St. James 8-2 and 10-0.

The Cardinals then returned home on Friday, April 23, and defeated Fairmont 3-2.

Hills-Beaver Creek's Taryn Rauk competes in Minneosta All-State All-Star baskeball game

By Brennen Rupp

For many prep athletes, when their senior season comes to an end, that's the last time they get to play the sport they love at a competitive level.

That's not the case for Hills-Beaver Creek's Taryn Rauk. Following graduation, Rauk will be playing basketball at Dordt University in Sioux Center, Iowa.

Rauk was one of the 40 athletes who competed in the Minnesota AllState All-Star Game on Saturday, April 24, at Carleton College.

"I was so thankful to be able to compete in the allstate game," Rauk said.

"It was an opportunity that will stick with me for a lifetime. It was so cool to be able to meet girls from all over Minnesota who have the same goals and to be able to play next to some super talented girls."

Rauk finished the game with nine points.

More importantly, she said it was another opportunity to put on the H-BC jersey one last time.

"It meant the world to me. It was so great to be able to represent the Hills-Beaver Creek Patriots one last time."

Rauk was able to enjoy individual and team success during her four years on the H-BC varsity squad. She credits her coaches, teammates and family for all the accolades that she was able to earn on the hardwood.

"I would not have been able to get there without my coaches that have pushed me every single day and spent endless hours continuing to develop me into a better player," Rauk said.

"My teammates have also played a huge role to get me to where I am today with their endless support and encouragement.

I also could not have done it without my supportive family and community by my side through everything."

When it comes to habitat, variety is spice of life

I just love it when it finally gets to be 70 degrees and the sun shines. My last wild-life ride included a ground hog, a new bald eagle nest, one mink, tons of Canada geese, raccoons, American kestrels, turkey vultures, turkeys, numerous white tail deer and a few mergansers and wood ducks utilizing my nesting boxes.

My favorite, though, is the big and bad ringneck pheasant.

Male ringnecks, called cocks, are more visible this time of year than any other. Everyone reports seeing them on the roads everywhere, leaving the impression that there must be tons of them.

This is not really the case. The average life expectancy of a pheasant is 11 months. Some die just after they hatch and others die two years later.

For a pheasant to reach the age of three hardly ever happens. From the peak of the hatch, which happens in Minnesota about June 10, numbers will decline for many reasons down to about 40 percent of that peak total in a normal year with normal winter weather. This leaves 40 percent left to carry on the next season's reproduction efforts.

 $The \, reason \, you \, see \, roosters \, all \, the \, time \, in \, the \, spring \, is$ that they

The average rooster male services about a dozen hens. They can do the job for three dozen or more at one time. They will crow and flap their wings to attract the mates they desire.

Roosters actually lose a pretty large percentage of their body weight with this effort. Crowing and flapping, not to mention fighting with rival males, must take a lot of energy.

If you have never seen roosters battling it out, you are missing quite a sight. In the heat of these battles, you can often walk up very close to action.

When the hens lay their

When the hens lay their clutch and hatch a brood, the tough part of being a pheasant begins. Many chicks will die in the first week. Predation and in some cases cold, wet weather are to blame.

Years ago, I wanted all of my wildlife habitat to be thick, tall grass. Certain times of the year pheasants will absolutely need this kind of cover. But when you are a pheasant chick, this robust cover can be a killer. Momma hen will move about throughout the day with the chicks following behind. If the cover is too thick, the chicks cannot keep up and they are in many cases just left behind.

Brood cover, as it is called, is much more desirable this time of year. "What is brood cover?" you might ask. This is mix of much shorter and less dense cover, hopefully with lots of forbs and flowers mixed in.

This kind of cover has many open spaces, areas under the leaves and stems with some dirt exposed.

These open areas under the canopy allow the chicks easier walking and allow them to better keep up with their mom. Flowers and forbs are broad leaf plants that are insect incubators. Pheasant chicks survive their first few weeks with insects as their primary food source. Grasshoppers are a favorite.

Tall grasses, on the other hand, have almost no insects for baby pheasants to feed on. If you have a wildlife property, it should have a mix of different kinds of habitats or cover so it can fulfill all the needs of pheasant adults and chicks alike for all of the seasons, not just thick cover for the wintertime.

Public lands are strategically designed to provide for all of the needs of wildlife year-round. When seeding new public land acres, I have often seen five to six distinctly different seeding mixes all planted on different parts of the property. This was almost never done in the past, and the more scientific methods used today result in much better and longer-lasting wildlife habitats wildlife habitats.

The more attention you pay to wildlife biology, the more you learn about what is and is not good habitat. They all look good from the road, but you need to get out and walk around in them to see just how unique they really are. Take a few hours and do just that this week.

Do you not know? Have you not heard?

Read Isaiah 40:28-31: "Do you not know? Have you not heard? The Lord is the everlasting God, the Creator of the ends of the earth. He will not grow tired or weary, and his understanding no one can fathom. He gives strength to the weary and increases the power of the weak. Even youths growtired and weary, and young men stumble and fall; but those who hope in the Lord will renew their strength. They will soar on wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary, they will walk and not be faint." (New International Version (NIV).

Those verses are favorites of many people, or at least the last verse is with its image of soaring like an eagle.

I also have found these verses inspiring over the years, though there have been times when I started reading these verses with Isaiah asking that question, "Have you not heard?" and thought to myself "heard what?"

Isaiah moves on to talking about God as the Creator of the earth and, of course, I've heard that many times. I've been hearing that since I was a child: "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth..." That's a beginning Sunday school lesson as well as Apostle's Creed 101.

I've always been convinced Isaiah wants us to hear something more than that. The key word here seems to be "weary."

I am sure you'd agree that we all grow weary from time to time. Weary is also a strong word, one that says much more than "I am tired."

Most, if not all, of us have experienced weariness during this past pandemic year. Isaiah says everyone grows weary at some point, no matter your age. Isaiah is trying to make us aware that any and all human beings can become weary.

This passage in Isaiah also contains one of those great "But God..." promises that are sprinkled throughout the Bible and are treasures to hold on to. "But those who hope in the Lord will renew their strength." And the reason is that God does not grow weary! Ever!

According to Isaiah, to wait for the Lord is to look up in awe and remember the expansive power and might of the one who created you. To wait for the Lord is to find your small place in God's vast universe of mystery and wonder and know that God is still there with you.

God numbers you. God calls you by name. To wait for the Lord is to be brought to your knees by the knowledge deep within that the only thing greater than the vast reach of the One who stretches the heavens like the canvas of an artist is the vast wonder of God's love and care....

To wait for the Lord is to cling to the very beauty of God and the promise that the Lord does not faint or grow weary.

Isaiah wants us to know for sure – "Have you not heard?" - that God does not faint or grow weary in God's care for you ... in God's presence with you...in God's love for you.

Now you know and now you have heard! God does not grow weary, and those who hope in the Lord will renew their strength. May you hold on to that promise even as God holds on to you!
