

Sanford announces changes to local hospice, homecare program

By Lori Sorenson

The Sanford Luverne hospice program is on the verge of several major changes.

Staff and volunteers were notified in mid-April that home health services will be based out of Windom and hospice services will be based out of Luverne.

Current home care staff will transition to employment through Good Samaritan Society, which Sanford now owns, and they will no longer provide hospice services after the transition later this summer.

The hospice cottages in Luverne and Worthington will continue operating as they do now, and nursing services will be provided by the current staff of the Worthington program.

Since the Luverne Cottage opened in 1998, it has served nearly 800 patients.

Sanford Hospice Luverne will expand to an 11-county group of hospice programs under the Sanford umbrella.

Although nurses and staff were told the effects of the transitions will be minimal, several longtime hospice professionals in Luverne are leaving their positions.

Hospice social worker Jill Roeman, who has been with the Luverne program 20 years, has accepted a job with Avera in Rock Rapids, Iowa. Her last day is Thursday, June 23.

Hospice registered nurse Tammy Moeller was told her position will be eliminated, and she will assume a position at Sanford Luverne in employee health.

Manfred House on National Register of Historic Places

'Save the Manfred House' lobbies for structure, state DNR will decide

By Lori Sorenson

The Manfred house atop the Blue Mounds State Park is now listed on the National Register of Historic Places, thanks to efforts of the nonprofit group, Save the Manfred House.

"Obviously, our group is pleased with the recognition both for cultural importance it has and the design significance of it," said Tom Brakke, a member of Save the Manfred House. "That recognition is fantastic and supports our mission in wanting to save it." The designation, announced June 3, means it would qualify for grant funding. The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources owns the structure, and recognizes the historic designation. "It is a tribute of recognition to the significance of place especially relative to Mr. Manfred's writing,' said Bob Welsh, DNR Resource and Asset Management Section Manager. "We will proceed through a thorough review as is required when making any kind of alterations to historic structures and we are prepared to mitigate in whatever way is necessary." The house is deemed unsafe due to moisture issues affecting structural integrity, and the Minnesota DNR decided to dismantle the building, leaving behind a portion of the home's footprint as the base for a Fred Manfred landmark. For background, Welsh said the DNR in 2019 hired an architectural and engineering consulting firm to evaluate the Manfred house and surrounding area, and to develop three conceptual designs for the future use of the area as the "Eagle Rock Vista" trailhead and day-use facility. "A final design for the trailhead facility includes elements from all three of the concepts," Welsh said.

Piersons chosen as parade marshals for Saturday's Hardwick Jubilee Days parade

By Mavis Fodness

Longtime Hardwick area residents Wes and Patti Pierson will be featured in Saturday evening's Hardwick Jubilee Days parade.

Anna Haas, representing the Community Club, asked the Piersons if they would do the honor.

"They have been a staple in this community for many, many years and have been actively involved with the community as a whole," Haas said.

Wes Pierson and Patti Kirby both grew up in the Hardwick area, attended grade school in Hardwick through eighth grade, and graduated from Luverne High School in 1958 and 1963 respectively.

They married, moved away, had three children and forged careers elsewhere before returning to Patti's childhood home outside of Hardwick decades later in retirement.

Each has fond memories of Hardwick's frequent holiday celebrations and activities such as city crews piling snow on Main Street for tobogganing, years of playing fast pitch softball and ultimately meeting each other.

"Activities in Hardwick were awfully good," Patti recalled. "It was fun, fun times.'

Wes, now 81, met Patti when he was 19 and delivering eggs to the Kirby family a couple miles east of Hardwick.

"I asked her mom if I could take her out - if I had someone chaperone us - and she told me to come back when Pat was 16 (which was a couple of years away). So, I did. I think her dad thought I would forget about her," Wes said.

The couple married in 1964 (when Patti turned 19) in the Blue Mound Lutheran Church south of Hardwick.

The day after the wedding, they left for Camp Huachuca in Arizona, where Wes Patti often found employment with each of Wes' employers, including his retirement years at Glen's Food Center and Teal's Market, where he worked in accounting and she was a cashier.

The couple has experienced some health setbacks, most recently with Patti undergoing chemo treatments for ovarian cancer.

School secretary gives up job she loves after 41 years

By Lori Sorenson

Diana Ouverson could have retired 10 years ago, but she liked her job so much she stayed.

"I love my job. Period. I love kids. I love people," Ouverson said Friday, her last day with the Luverne School District. "It's going to be very difficult leaving.'

As Luverne Middle School-High School secretary, Ouverson has come to know thousands of students and their families.

Considering an average 90 students per graduating class, that's nearly 4,000 students over the past 41 years of her career in the school office.

And many of them she's nurtured on their path to graduation.

School secretary Diana Ouverson retired last week after 41 years.

in hard work served her well in her career, when she claimed fewer than 10 sick days in four decades.

Back to school

She graduated from Luverne High School in 1965 and returned to the district in 1981 after her two sons, Chad (LHS class of 1988) and Matthew (LHS '93), were in school.

Gregg Gropel hired her in the Community Education office and in 1983, a position opened in the Luverne High School counselor's office.

She first worked under superintendent Norm Miller. Other superintendents since then have included George Maurer, Vince Schafer, Gary Fisher and the current Craig Oftedahl.

The first principals she worked with were Jim Harner and John Rath (middle school and high school). "Harner and Rath, they were such a team."

After that Harner and Fisher were middle school and high school principals. Donna Judson was

And most recently Jason Phelps came on as middle school principal to work with Johnson as high school principal.

Hemming gowns and running mimeographs

This spring her grandson, Matthew (son of Chad and Christine McClure) was among the graduating seniors, and she had a front row seat for the occasion, since it was her job to assist students and staff with commencement details.

"I did caps, gowns, the lineup, the seating arrangements," she said. "We used to use old choir gowns, and I used to hand-stitch them – hem them up or let them down or fix zippers."

Her other duties comprise a list too long to mention.

Among other things, she answered phones, greeted visitors, entered grades, set up new families in the district, set up lockers, mailed out student handbooks, tracked purchase orders and made sure deliveries were accounted for and dispersed to teachers and staff who needed them.

Meanwhile she kept up with changing technology.

"In the beginning, teachers handed me their grades and I wrote them on a transcript," Ouverson recalled.

pice in Luverne for 24 years, will work for Sanford under Good Samaritan Home Health Care.

Lanoue said she's committed to providing quality care, but she's apprehensive about the coming changes.

"I have greatly appreciated being part of the hospice community and being able to care for friends, neighbors and families," she said.

"But I'm heartbroken. Absolutely heartbroken. I'm sure the new staff are wonderful providers, and my hope is for our amazing community to welcome them and build community connections."

She said that's the key for a successful program.

"Continuum of care is what results from building relationships with care providers who know your story and your history and the things that are important to you about your care. ... The program is what you see because of the people and passion we have for this."

She said the hospice home health care component is an important piece of the overall hospice care program. "We've been a dual program since Day 1, home health and hospice."

Continuum of care

Hospice social worker Jill Roemen agreed.

"We were such a good team together," she said Monday.

"Home care often transitions to hospice and the cottage, and having the same nurses and staff involved provides a continuum of care."

By August, when patients transition to new staff, they will be cared for by different nurses.

Stan Williamson recently lost his wife, Karen, to cancer, and they utilized hospice home care and the hospice cottage during her final days.

"They're such great people," he said Monday. "I could call Sara (Lanoue) anytime with any question I had when Karen was at home. And when it was time for her to come to the cottage, she helped us get her there." Williamson's parents, Elmo and Dorothy, also were under hospice care in Luverne during their final days (2008 and 2017), with hospice at the nursing home and The Cottage. Stan said he had built relationships with local nurses, staff and volunteers when each of his parents passed away, and by the time Karen needed hospice services, they had developed relationships and trust with their caregivers. Lanoue said the Williamsons "epitomize" the value of local caregivers in the hospice program. "They trusted us because of their experience with us during the care of their other family members.' "We are living in this community and are taking care of our friends, neighbors, church family ... we are caring for our own," she said. "We are truly serving one another, and how important and valuable that is."

programs in other parts of the country, and he said Luverne's program is special.

"What struck me as unique about Luverne's hospice program is how connected the staff is to the community," he said.

"These are your neighbors and friends. ... Significant, too, was the fact that the same nurses who cared for patients in the home health program were there to continue care for those who ended up transitioning into hospice."

He said he was also impressed by the community support for hospice.

"The regular outpouring of financial support from the community demonstrates just how impactful and appreciated hospice has been in Luverne," he said.

Booe has been volunteer hospice chaplain since January.

"In the six months since, I've been able to see firsthand the passion each nurse and staff member has for this program," he said. "I pray God continues to bless Luverne's hospice program for the sake of those patients and families who are so well served by it."

Cottage and its donations stay in Luverne

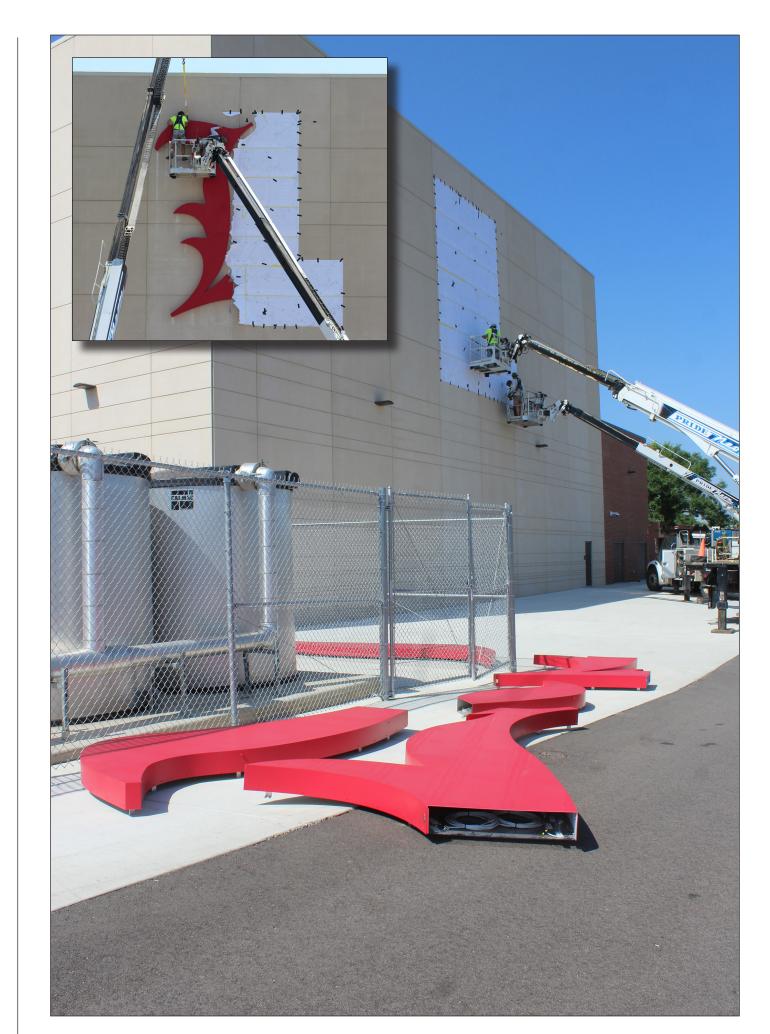

Roemen said she and many other Sanford staff members hope that longtime staff are recognized for their contributions.

For example, Saum raised a net $1.2 million over the past 25 years through the annual hospice charity banquet and auction.

"The work she has done for the program is amazing and we're so grateful for her and her team of volunteers," Lanoue said. "There will be other banquets, but without Helen, will it be the same?"

Roemen said it's important to clear up rumors about the donated money.

"The funds that were donated to The Cottage will stay in Luverne," she said. "And there will still be a hospice program in Luverne. It just won't be the same people." Lanoue said she hopes the success of the Luverne hospice program continues.

Giant'L'fitted into place at Luverne Schools

Another project funded by the 2184 Campaign was completed Monday when Pride Neon Sign Company of Sioux Falls hung a 20- by 20.5-foot "L" to the outside of the performing arts center's stage wall at Luverne Public Schools. Workers affixed a paper template to the wall before affixing the anchor bolts for the Old English script letter made from aluminum. Electricians will complete the wiring for backlighting the "L" that can be seen by passersby entering Luverne on North Highway 75. The 2184 Campaign is a fundraising effort by the Luverne Education Legacy Fund (LELF), formerly the Luverne School Foundation. The campaign sponsors enhancements in a partnership with Luverne Public Schools for academic initiatives, Cardinal activities, fine arts, campus beautification and alumni recognition.

Community connections

Hospice Chaplain Pastor Phil Booe of St. John Lutheran Church has worked with parishioners in hospice "We want hospice to continue to be a valued part of the community," she said.

"It won't be the same people, but we want to see it continue and we're hopeful these new faces and staff will be able to continue providing care."

Since 1993, the program has served more than 1,800 patients. Since the Cottage opened in 1998, it has served nearly 800 patients.

Dillon Hinker, director of Sanford Home and Community-Based Services, offered the following statement Monday in response to the Star Herald's question about why the changes are being implemented.

"Sanford Health is honored to care for hospice patients in Luverne and surrounding areas. To streamline operations, we are consolidating the Sanford Hospice locations in Worthington and Canby with Sanford Luverne Hospice. These businesses will operate from the Luverne location and Sanford Hospice caregivers will continue to care for our hospice patients and families."

dismantle the house prompted friends, family members and colleagues of Manfred to form the Save the Manfred House in 2019 to prevent demolition.

First on their agenda was to get the structure listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and they hired historic architect Rolf Anderson to submit the nomination.

The nomination included some background on the regionally acclaimed author who built the house.

"Frederick Manfred was larger than life. At six feet nine inches tall, he was a towering figure. His lifelong goal to produce a body of work that gave voice to an entire region over a span of 200 years was perhaps larger than life as well, and a remarkable literary achievement," Anderson wrote in the nomination.

"The Manfred House on the Blue Mounds was also a remarkable achievement. Perhaps it is not surprising that someone who was so closely connected to land would wish to build a house that was equally united with the land. The result was a design both bold and extraordinary in concept with its incorporation of living rock and integration with the natural landscape. The Manfred House represents one of Minnesota's most unique and powerful architectural expressions in residential design."

Brakke and other advocates of saving the house are now urging state officials to pursue new funding avenues that the historic designation provides.

"We hope the recognition and possible funding sources will prompt the DNR to get a qualified historical architect to properly assess it," Brakke said.

DNR recognizes Manfred's significance

In response to public interest, Welsh said the design process is carefully considering Manfred's cultural and historic significance.

"The DNR is working with the consulting firm to incorporate elements of the former Manfred House into the design in an attempt to balance recreational opportunities, natural resource protection, and the significance of the place that inspired Mr. Manfred's writings," Welsh said.

"Specifically, the consultant has been asked to propose an alternative that incorporates Mr. Manfred's writing room. Feedback from the public has included comments that the DNR 'should at least save the writing room.' The DNR will be reviewing the consultant's revised concept design and will share it with the public when ready."

History of house

Fred Manfred built the house in 1961 and he and his family lived there until the 1970s when financial difficulties forced a sale to the state.

It served for many years as a park interpretive center, but closed in 2016.

In 2017 the state began considering options for repairing it, and estimates were more than $400,000.

However, at that time there were more pressing capital emergencies, such as contaminated park water and addressing flood destruction of 2014 that blew out the dam and drained the lake.

News editors don't get hugs in the frozen foods aisle the way teachers do

Seven longtime teachers are retiring from the Luverne School District

this year, and it brought to mind a column I wrote several years ago about school teachers.

As a child, I idolized my teachers, so it's not surprising that I spent many long afternoons playing school with my sisters in the stairwell of our home near Kenneth.

My older sister, Lisa, and I would line up our younger three sisters, Linda, Lana and Lavelle, run them through a battery of Dick and Jane books and math flash cards.

Playing school and playing church often looked the same, since the songs we sang in Leota Christian Grade School were children's hymns, like "Jesus Loves Me" and "Go Tell It on the Mountain."

Of course, preschool and toddler sisters weren't very attentive, but it was very empowering to pretend we were in charge of a roomful of captive students.

My favorite teacher was Mrs. Klumper, who taught third and fourth grade for more years in her career than I was able to grasp at nine vears old. She was known for her strict rules and a nononsense classroom style.

She wore polyester pants, paisley print blouses, eyeglasses and no makeup (except lipstick), but she smelled nice (like talcum powder). And she strolled up and down the rows of desks about her.

The fact that she meant business made the times when she smiled all the more rewarding.

I'll never forget how the words on the pages came to life while she read aloud "Charlotte's Web," "James and the Giant Peach" and "Where the Red Fern Grows."

She'd peer over the top of the book, waiting for shrieks of laughter to quiet so she could continue.

She also knew just when to pause for sad moments in the story line to sink in. She'd sigh heavily for effect and then continue.

Kids apparently still idolize their teachers. A few weeks ago in the grocery store, a little girl dashed across the room to hug Mrs. Sandy Klosterbuer, who returned the greeting with the same enthusiasm.

How many other jobs yield such popularity?

Newspaper work has its rewards, but I'll likely never be hugged in the frozen foods aisle with such genuine adoration.

Lucky teachers. Best wishes, Mrs. Klosterbuer, and all your retiring colleagues. And rest in peace, Mrs. Klumper, who passed away six months ago at the age of 92.

Relay for Life event is smaller event; cancer is still a big deal

Rock County Relay for Life hit its prime in Luverne about 10 years ago when hundreds of people raised thousands of dollars to support the American Cancer Society's search for a cure.

Dozens of local teams fundraised year-round, and in June they met other teams to "relay" at the park amid live music, food booths, testimonials and, of course, lighted luminaries in memory of or in honor of those with cancer diagnoses.

The staggering amounts of money from generous souls has been truly remarkable, but more than the dollars, and more than the survivors' balloon release and more than the laps around the park, Relay for Life has always been about support.

The annual event provides a dedicated time and place for people who have been touched by cancer to connect with other people who have been touched by cancer.

They include cancer survivors.

They include cancer patients at various stages of chemo and radiation.

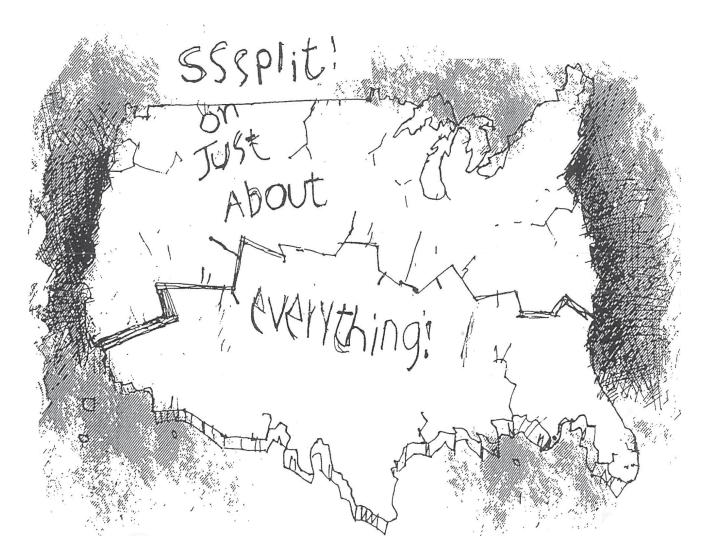

They include those who are grieving the loss of loved ones who didn't survive cancer.

They include those who are juggling work and family schedules to care for loved ones with cancer - shuttling from one doctor appointment to another, from one treatment protocol to another, and trying to provide comfort in between. The list goes on.

Relay for Life as a community event isn't the big deal it once was. But cancer is still a very big deal, and we can all still support our local families affected by cancer.

This year's event is from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Friday, June 24, in the form of a block party at Take 16 Brewing Company on East Main Street. Check out the ad on our backpage, or visit RelayForLife.org/ RockCountyMN.

There are no secrets here: 'A well-behaved dog is welcomed almost everywhere ...'

By Scott Rall, Outdoors columnist

I often wonder what life would be like without a dog or dogs in it. I have written many times about my four Labradors and how much they mean to me and my outdoor way of life. Tracer is going on 11, Sarge is almost 9, Raider is pushing past 6 and my little guy, Ghost, was 2 in March.

When you hunt as much as I do, it is more work than one dog can handle, especially if the temperatures are high and heat exhaustion is a major concern. Having many dogs allows me to hunt for an hour with one dog, and that dog rests as I take a fresh dog into the field.

The only way to be able to live harmoniously with four dogs that all reside in the house is to have four dogs that actually listen.

There are three distinct kinds of dogs that fit into three categories – dogs that hunt well, dogs that are easy to live with, and dogs that are both.

Very few dogs fit into the third category. The difference between a dog that listens and one that doesn't depends on the owner. As the saying goes, "A well-behaved dog is welcomed almost everywhere, and a badly behaved dog is welcomed absolutely nowhere.'

Why would anyone want to spend 10-12 years with a dog that does not listen? Does not seem like all that hard a question, but it must be a difficult one because the majority of dog owners cannot answer this question with a rational answer or reason.

If I hear one excuse over and over, it is that the owner does not know how to train the dog properly. This might have been a sound excuse 20 years ago but with the videos on YouTube and all the books available on the subject, it really does not hold any water today.

The real answer in most cases is that the owner will not dedicate the time and effort to train the dog and hold it to high standards after the training is completed.

A professionally trained dog, one that has spent months with a professional trainer, will revert to an un-trained dog in a matter of a few short months if the owner does not regularly reenforce the lessons the dog has been taught. It only takes about a week for the dog to learn who in the house means business and who will let them get away with just about anything.

The first thing a dog needs to know is that they are a dog, not a human child, not the leader of any pack or any high-level position in the family pack.

The reason professional dog trainers thrive in this country is not because there is nobody else capable of doing the job, but there are not enough people willing to commit the time and energy to do the job on their own.

I live in a town where people walk their dogs around the lake constantly. About 80 percent of the dogs are walking their human and not the other way around. On many occasions I can take these "un-walkable dogs" for an afternoon and when that day is done, they will walk at heel with me anywhere I want to go.

A gal told me three years ago that I had saved her dog's life, because without that one day of training and showing her what to do, she would have had to either give the dog away or have had it put to sleep if another suitable family could not be found.

At the end of the day, when you command a dog to do a certain thing, they need to know the command is not a request. It is an order. You will not need to utilize any high level of force or correction.

You will use repetition and body language to communicate with your dog to achieve the desired outcome. Remember the first rule of owning a dog is that the dog must realize and understand that it's a dog.

You can follow along in this column over the next few months as I will be starting a four-part series on the basics of how to train your dog. There's no magic here; just basics that allow you to own and love a dog that listens. I look forward to sharing my almost 25 years of experience on the subject.

You should feel free to reach out to me before, during or after this series and I will be glad to help you along your way to having and enjoying a dog that falls into Category 3.

Payloader arrives in Beaver Creek

By Lori Sorenson

Beaver Creek's $123,000 pay loader has arrived, and it's been put to work on city business.

After their meeting Wednesday, June 15, Beaver Creek City Council members and city maintenance supervisor Travis Helgeson agreed to a brief show and tell in the city shop.

The machinery, a 2021 Cat 910 with a snowplow attachment, showed up earlier this month after the council voted in December to make the purchase.

Helgeson had encouraged the city to sell its 2005 loader tractor and 1979 grader in exchange for newer, more versatile equipment that will do both jobs.

The city's previous equipment didn't move heavy snow efficiently, and Helgeson said the old grader was cumbersome and was used only three to five times per year.

In the bid process, Caterpillar would best serve the city's needs. The company offered $7,850 on trade for the city's grader (bought for $10,000 nearly 10 years ago) and $18,695 on trade for the city's tractor.

That brought final cost to $104,345. After a $20,000 down payment, the remaining $84,345 is being financed through Security Savings Bank on a five-year loan at 2.75 percent interest.

Payments will be roughly $1,500 per month, or $18,000 per year. The first payments weren't made until after the equipment was delivered.

The council discussed in December that the city has $58,000 in its equipment fund, so the $20,000 down payment could be paid from that fund.

Council member Pat Bender made the motion to approve the pay loader purchase. "I just feel we're getting such a good trade economy, and there's a need for it."

Cody Dietrich, who supported the motion, said it's true that new equipment will continue to increase in price, but today's used prices will not hold forever.

"In a year, the used could be worth nothing and the new isn't going to come down, so you have to look at it that way," he said. "To get $8,000 for that grader – that's not going to happen again."

Bender said the purchase would be a prudent use of city funds. "Our budget is $15,000 for street equipment," she said, noting that annual payments are $18,000 and the difference could be funded through reserves.

She pointed out that there will be no equipment expenses for the next three years due to the warranty on the new pay loader, and in five years the loan

H-BC students attend home events at no charge

School board also approves salary contracts, new gym design

By Mavis Fodness

K-12 students in Hills-Beaver Creek School District will be admitted free to home events beginning this fall.

Board members approved the change to the district's fee schedule at their June 13 meeting.

"We want to promote student attendance to our extra-curricular events," said board chairman Arlyn Gehrke.

Previously, students were charged $4 to enter home events. The district estimates a $3,000 decline in revenue due to the fee change.

Three two-year contracts approved

Board members approved two-year contracts and salary increases with three district employees for the 2022-23 and 2023-24 school years.

Secondary principal Andrew Kellenberger's contract is for 225 days per year.

The first-year salary will be $104,000 and the second will be $108,000, plus up to $4,000 in school administration education reimbursement over the two years.

Kellenberger's salary for 2021-22 was $100,000.

Business manager Amanda Rozeboom's contract is for 260 years per year.

Year 1 salary will be $57,500 and Year 2 will be $60,000. Rozeboom's previous salary was $55,000.

Building, grounds and transportation director Dalton Bass' contract is also for 260 days. His salary for Year 1 will be $53,000 and Year 2 $55,000. Bass' current salary is $51,000.

New gym design chosen for high school

In other matters at their June 13 meeting, H-BC School Board members approved improvements to the floor of the secondary gymnasium this summer.

The new floor design features a 14-foot Patriot mascot at the center.

At each end of the basketball court, the words "Hills-Beaver Creek" will be written in 2-foot-high letters on the floor, and the length of the words will be 33 feet.

Along the sides of the court, "Patriots" will be written in 3-foot letters and stretch a little more than 20 feet.

Stain colors for the refinished court will be blue and nutmeg.

The current floor only has one graphic with the words "Hills-Beaver Creek Patriots" in the center.

Cost for the sanding, painting and finishing is $21,000. The graphics painting is estimated at about $5,000.

FLR Sanders of Princeton, Minnesota, will complete the work on the gym floor. Work is scheduled to begin Aug. 1 and take four weeks to complete.

Nutcracker collection grows thanks to Northfield donor

By Lori Sorenson

It was like Christmas in June for Betty Mann Tuesday evening, June 14, when a pickup load of nutcrackers rolled into the parking lot at the Rock County History Center.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. In all, she counted 134, all of them German collectibles, plus an assortment of vintage German ornaments.

The Northfield donor, Marvin Farmer, had worked for Midwest of Cannon Falls, a gifts and collectibles Mann said.

She explained that the collectible nutcrackers were produced in limited supply, and Farmer would keep one back every time he learned they were going to stop making it.

The donation includes nutcrackers of all sizes, the largest at about 6 feet tall and the smallest at several inches, and Mann said only three are duplicates to the ones in the History Center's current collection.

In an already crowded display

"Some of these pieces were made in the German Democratic Republic, and some say West Germany," she said. "So, you know that's from the time the wall was up."

The pieces are currently spread over two large tables for sorting, and they'll be displayed with the other German collections, such as Steinbach, Christian Albrecht, Erzgebirge and Seiffen.

When asked if the latest addition would put Luverne closer to having the largest nutcracker collection in the world, Mann said that's not her goal.

1943: Diamond Club talks with William Everett

The following article is part of the Diamond Club Member group that began in the January 7, 1943, issue of the Rock County Star Herald. Members of this group consist of persons of age 75 and older.

March 11, 1943 "Can't agree with you that Luverne's as good a place as any," declared William Everett, when someone commented that this part of Minnesota was a pretty fine spot for a home. "I'll take the west any day. You'll make two

"Verl and I were familiar with the company, because years ago we had purchased nutcrackers from them," room of more than 4,000 nutrackers, Mann said it will take some "rearranging" to expand and make room for new pieces — or in this case, very old pieces.

orange, and snowball viburnums. These are all spring-blooming plants, and cutting them back now gives the new growth time to mature and develop buds for next year's flowers. I recommend pruning to eliminate the old stems to encourage new growth from the base of the shrub. When I looked at my potato crop last week, I noticed a busload of Colorado potato beetles had arrived! Those hungry buggers can strip away foliage in a flash, and worse still, they vector diseases in addition to reproducing at an alarming rate.

I got my bottle of Sevin insecticide, which gives excellent control, and remembered that I had not used it for a couple of years. I shook the bottle pretty vigorously for awhile, took the lid off and used a stiff wire to check if the liquid was all fluid.

What I found was that the solids were no longer suspended in the liquid. So I pried loose what had settled with the wire and then shook it until it all dissolved. Had I not done that, likely what had settled out would be the active ingredient and my spray application would have had little effect on the beetles. But my beetles weren't that lucky!

Be sure to deadhead perennials that have finished blooming to keep them from going to seed and giving you some more "weeds" to try to control ... that is, unless you want more of that particular dollars for every one here if you just go about it right."

That led to the question, "Bill, how did you happen to make Luverne your home, then?"

"Well," said the old timer, "it was this way. I came here from Doon, Ia. I didn't know where I was going, but I knew I was going. I went to the hotel to wait between trains and I guess it never came. Some fellow came into the hotel and wanted a man to go to work on a farm. I went to work, and Luverne has been myhome ever since. That was in August, 1917."

Dakota Territory born

Mr. Everett isn't certain just how old he is, but thinks he'll be 77 on April 21. He was born at Elk Point Union county, Dakota territory either in 1863 or '64. Records of his birth have since been lost.

There were still Indians and gun-totin' whites at that time and Hell's Bend," the wooded area where the Big Sioux empties into the Missouri, was still a hot spot. "I knew of four fellows who died with their boots on there. Two of them came to Johnny St. Pierre's cabin one night and he got them both. Johnny St. Pierre was a violinist who played for dances all through the country. He had just come back from a trip to Sioux City, Omaha and Missouri Valley, and two fellows came to get his money. He pulled his .44 before they did. One of them dropped right outside a window - the other was found the next morning at the edge of a wheat field, five or six rods away. As far as I know, that cleaned up Hell's Bend."

•The unexpected happened this week in that two Ford automobiles, stolen from Rock county owners, have been recovered, one at Valley Springs and the other at Worthington, but the practically new 1921 Chandler seven passenger touring car, abandoned Wednesday of last week near Magnolia, remains unclaimed.

One of the Ford cars recovered was owned by Henry Hass, of Vienna township, and was stolen Saturday evening, after it had been left standing opposite the Farmer's National bank. It was missed at about nine o'clock in the evening, but it was not until about midnight that it was definitely ascertained that it had been stolen, for it was thought that one of the young people had taken the car to go to a dance. This car was recovered at Worthington the following day.

Within six months after he had entered Mr. Brace's employ, he knew the name of every man who lived in Union, Spink, Clay and Yankton counties, and on the darkest night could drive to the ranch of any person one could name. In those days there weren't roads – only Indian trails, Mr. Everett said, and it was not a matter of not being able to find a visible trail of any kind, but to pick the right one. When not riding, he would drive a livery, and on many occasions, it was his lot to take people to other ranches from the Brace ranch. For the average boy of nine or 10 to be out in the dark with only the stars to guide him, the job would have been frightening indeed, but to him, it was a thrill and a pleasure to hold the reins on a steady team and figure out the shortest Indians in that area, but most of them were civilized. He recalls that one time when he was a child of two or three years, two Indians came and asked his mother for something to eat. She refused for some reason or other, and one of the Indians picked him up by the heels and was about to smash his head against the side of the building when his father's friend, also an Indian, came to his rescue. Several days later Mr. Everett's father was walking along the river and there came across the body of the Indian with four arrows in his body.

Elk Point was the Gretna Green of the northwest when Mr. Everett was a boy. Being in Dakota territory where there was no marriage license law and where couples would come in droves from Iowa and Nebraksa to tie the nuptial knot.

Father: Three Trades

Mr. Everett's father was Abner Everett, a man who had served as an apprentice for 15 years and had learned three different trades. He spent five years learning to be a cabinet maker, earning only 25 cents a month for that period. His first job as an apprentice was making his own tools. After his cabinet apprenticeship, he learned to be a wheelwright, and spent five years as an apprentice in this trade as well. His wages at that time was increased to 50 cents a month. After that, he served as a carpenter's and joiners apprentice, and then went into business for himself at Elk Point.

The Luverne man did not remain at home after he was nine years of age. He went to work for J. H. Brace, a cattle drover, and for three years, he virtually lived in the saddle, traveling with Mr. Brace way home. Visited This Area

It was when he was thus employed that he made his first trip to this section of the country. His employer had bought cattle in the Garretson, Sherman and Jasper areas, and he was driving them toward Elk Point. He had a herd of 180 head when he stopped to spend the night at a farm place east of Sioux Falls. It was then he learned that the famous James brothers had been there the night before him.

Van Maanen finishes H-BC golf career at state

Senior Tess Van Maanen traveled to Becker Tuesday and Wednesday, June 14 and 15, to compete at the state Class A golf meet for the third time in her high school golfing career.

She came away with a 25th-place finish under challenging course conditions.

"Pebble Creek Country Club plays very difficult," said H-BC golf coach Dan Ellingson. "There is lots of water, hills and sand, along with very fast greens. The best players in the state need to play very well to score well."

Sandbulte ends high school track career as most decorated runner in Luverne High School history

By Jason Berghorst

"I guess you could say naturally gifted."

That's how Ashton Sandbulte describes his athletic — and specifically running — abilities.

"My training for track is basically the football season and working with my dad on the farm," said Sandbulte, son of Curt and Jessie Sandbulte.

He completed one of the most decorated track and field careers in Luverne High School history last week in the state meet at St. Michael-Albertville High School.

He won state championships in both the 100-meter and 200-meter dashes and anchored the 4-by-100-meter relay team, which placed second and set a school record at the state meet.

To say that Sandbulte's senior season was record-breaking would be an understatement.

In the 100-meter dash, he first broke the school record his junior season and went on to break his own record four more times this season.

Sandbulte also set the subsection and Section 3A meet records in the 100-meter dash his senior season.

He was within four-hundredths of a second of breaking the all-time Class A state meet record in the 100 during the prelims at the state meet, establishing himself as one of the fastest high school runners ever in the state.

"That's crazy to think about," Sandbulte admitted.

He also broke the school record earlier this season in the 200-meter dash and broke it twice more at this year's state meet, in addition to being the anchor of the record-breaking 4-by-100-meter relay team.

"Until this year I hadn't really thought of the 200 record, but as it got closer, I knew I wanted to get it," Sandbulte said.

"It felt good to have such a successful state meet. There was some pressure and expectations going in," said Sandbulte, who had the fastest 100-meter speed in the state ahead of the state meet. "It was a relief to win, to be honest."

The recent LHS grad began his track and field career in seventh grade and first competed at the state track meet in ninth grade. He was an alternate, and when an older member of the 4-by-400-meter relay was unable to compete, Sandbulte stepped in and ran the fastest time in the relay.

The pandemic canceled his sophomore season in 2020. His final two seasons have been nothing short of historic, however.

'Coachable and team-oriented'

"Ashton has grown into an extremely coachable and team-oriented kid," said Pete Janiszeski, LHS head track and field coach.

"Everything I asked him to do for the team this season he accepted without ever batting an eye," Janiszeski said.

"Anything that was going to benefit his teammates he was willing to do. ... As a coach, these are the things you hope to instill in your athletes and the things that make you most proud."

Ahrendt first LHS

By Jason Berghorst

The Luverne Redbirds won three more games this week, all in the Gopher-First Nite League, to run their league record to 9-2 and overall record to 11-2 on the season.

The Redbirds defeated the Lakefield Horned Frogs 17-7 in a 10-run rule seven-inning game at Redbird Field June 15 before holding on for a close 7-6 win in Adrian Friday night.

On Sunday, Luverne traveled to Hadley and exploded for 25 runs in seven innings against the Buttermakers and earned a 25-13 victory.

The Birds were scheduled to host the Pipestone A's Wednesday night (June 22) at Redbird Field before hosting Brookings Friday night in a non-league contest.

Luverne will then play two road games on Sunday. The Redbirds are scheduled to play Fox Lake at 2 p.m. and Fairmont at 5 p.m.

The Lakefield Horned Frogs came to Redbird Field Wednesday night, June 15, for a league contest against the Redbirds.

The hosts had a 10-6 advantage after five innings before Luverne scored two in the sixth and seven more in the seventh to reach the tenrun rule and end the game after seven innings.

With two out and a nine-run advantage in the bottom of the seventh and Derek Lundgren at bat, Cade Wenninger stole third base and Colby Crabtree stole second. When Lundgren hit a line drive single to left field, Wenninger scored on his 20th birthday to end the game with a victory.

The Birds stole eight total bases, including five by Cade Wenninger and two by Crabtree.

Gaige Nath led the Redbird offense going three for five, including a double and a single. He scored two runs and recorded four RBIs in the game.

The Luverne Redbirds came home from Adrian Friday night with a close 7-6 victory over the A's. Luverne scored single runs in the top of the first and second innings before opening up for four more runs in the fourth inning.

The inning began with singles by Lundgren, Johnson and Ben Serie. All three runners then scored when Logan Norman hit a three-RBI double. Crabtree then hit a double that scored Norman.

Adrian answered with three runs in the bottom of the fourth to cut the lead in half to 6-3.

Each team scored an additional run in the fifth to bring the score to 7-4.

The A's cut the lead again by scoring two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to get within one run of Luverne.

When neither team scored in the final two innings, the Redbirds escaped with a 7-6 win.

When Hunter Ahrendt picks up his Remington shotgun Friday, June 24, he'll become the first Luverne High School athlete to compete in the Minnesota State High School League Clay Target Tournament.

"I'm excited," the recent LHS graduate said. "I am just praying for good weather -Iam tired of the wind."

Ahrendt, the oldest child of Jeff and Johnna Ahrendt of rural Luverne, earned an invitation to the elite tournament as an individual by posting a season average of hitting 23.6 clay targets out of the round of 25.

Hunter Ahrendt, a recent Luverne High School graduate, holds a patch he received as an All-State shooter (state's Top 100) for the 2022 spring season.

H-BC's Dwire named top female shooter in conference, earns berth to national event Journey Dwire, a recent Hills-Beaver Creek High School graduate, was named the Top Female Shooter for her efforts this spring in the Class 3A Conference 1 trap shooting league. She'll compete at nationals next month.

By Mavis Fodness

Recent Hills-Beaver Creek graduate Journey Dwire never expected to be named the top female shooter in the Class 3A-Conference 1.

She was awarded a first-place medal from the Minnesota State High School Clay Target League Wednesday, June 22, during the trap shooting championships in Alexandria.

The six-year member of the team said she was shocked to receive the award.

"My main goal was to justimprove every year," she said. "I never really expected to receive the award as there are so many female shooters in the state. It was really an amazing experience and I am truly grateful."

Dwire and her family frequently target practice at their acreage north of Beaver Creek. Her parents, Travis and Shannon Dwire helped her understand the importance of control and aim.

"Journey started out with a BB gun at age 6 and had fun shooting pop cans off a board," Travis said. "She took her youth firearms safety training in the sixth grade and started with a small-bore rifle and some pistol. She started getting into shotgunning in eighth grade when H-BC started a trap team."

Her parents also encouraged her to join the team in 2018.

"My love of trapshooting started when my dad asked me if I wanted to try it since I was already good with targets," Dwire said. "I figured I had nothing to lose so I decided to give it a try. After my first year, I realized I loved it and wanted to continue."

Over the five-week spring season, Dwire shot an average of 20.7 clays out of 25.

For her last year on the team, her dad was the team's head coach.

"I believe that having my dad there made the sport easier," she said.

"I always know that I have someone who supports me, is right behind me, and watching me as I grow in a sport I love so much."

Trap shooting involves using a shotgun to shoot at a clay disk launched into the air.

Five shooters are at each launch site, and after each shot they rotate to a different shot point. Time between shots, although brief, allows shooters to become nervous, especially if a clay target is missed.

Dwire tells herself to be realistic in her approach to shooting.

"Between shots I try to remind myself I'm not there to shoot perfect. I am there to have fun and do what I enjoy. I try not to overthink it and tell myself that I do this for fun," she said.

At the Class 3A championships last week, Dwire hit 91 out of 100 clays and tied for 11th place among the female varsity shooters.

Based on her regular season and championship performance, she's been invited to compete in the USA Clay Target National Championships July 6-10 in Mason, Michigan.

"It is fun to watch how she grows from the perspective of the other coaches as well," Travis said. "There is an excitement when each team member succeeds, but also as a father you enjoy watching your daughter do well and enjoy the sport and have fun."

Journey Dwire was the top female shooting for the team, garnering 91 shoots, tying for 11th in the varsity female division. She also earned an invitation to the USA High School Clay Target Nationals in July. (See story on page 8A).

In the varsity male division, junior Luke Fuerstenberg and sophomore Cooper Gehrke tied for the top performances on the team with

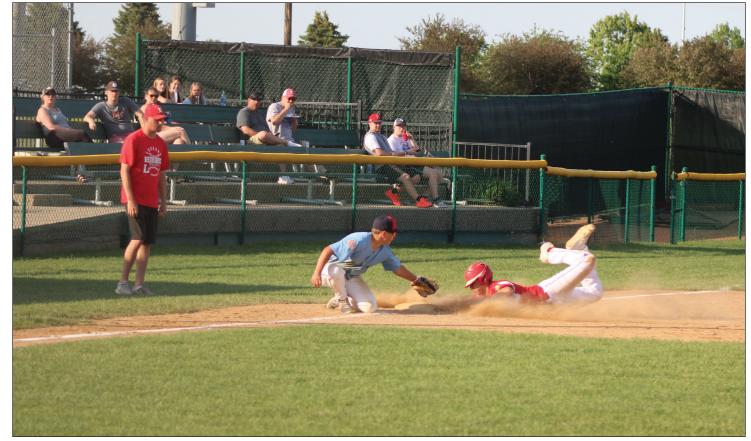

86. They tied for 192nd place. In the junior varsity di-

The team shot a 461 out of 500. Wheaton High School was the top Class 2A team with a score of 481.

Recent LHS graduates Hunter Ahrendt and Cheyenne Schutz each shot a straight-25 at the championship, along with teammate Jacob Henning, a junior at Adrian High School.

Ahrendt also made the 2022 spring season All-State Clay Target League and received a special patch (see related story). He averaged 23.6 during the five-week season.

Henning was Luverne's top male shooter, finishing fifth among the 300 varsity Class 2A male participants with a total score of 97.

Schutz was Luverne's top female shooter, finishing tied for 15th. She shot an 82 over four rounds.

In the novice division, top female gun was Rayann Remme, an LHS sophomore. Remme shot a 66 and finished 12^{th} .

LHS sophomore Cash Bonnett was the team's top junior shooter, garnering an 85 and tying for 41st overall in Class 2A.

More than 7,900 high school students were registered to shoot during the June 13-21 championship event.

He ended the spring 2022 season listed in the top 100 shooters in the state, finishing tied for 74th.

Ahrendt was presented with an All-State patch June 14, when Luverne participated in the Minnesota Trap Shooting Championship in Alexandria.

Being able to move on to this week's state tournament is a crowning achievement for Ahrendt, whose love of hunting began at a very young age when he would accompany his dad and grandpa, Lowell Ahrendt.

"I remember sitting in a blind at 5 years old, just watching," he said.

Through the years, Ahrendt became a hunter and enjoys hunting white-tail deer and pheasant hunting with a dog.

He's played organized sports (his name, Hunter, comes from a movie baseball player), but he dropped playing football and basketball and now focuses on his love of trap shooting.

He's been a member of the high school program since it started in 2017. He was a sixth-grader at the time.

"Trap is the closest thing (sport) to hunting I can do with my buddies," Ahrendt said.

Two years after joining the high school team, he shot a perfect 25 out of 25. Last year he shot a perfect 50 out of 50.

This year Ahrendt achieved one 50-straight and four 25-straights.

He said he would have achieved a higher season average if not for one round where he mistakenly used a fellow shooter's Remington over-under gun instead of his own. The shotguns looked identical except for one critical factor.

"I shot terribly," he said. "If you've shot with a gun for a long time, don't go changing it up."

He views the 55 athletes out for this year's school team as allies and not as competitors, as head coach Scott Loos-brock and the other assistant coaches stress to the team.

"The biggest thing is not to compete with your friends because it sets a standard of pressure ... instead cheer them on," Ahrendt said.

Routine is another competitive strategy for Ahrendt. He's developed two must-do routines before each shoot: Move the microphone that activates the clay target launcher a couple of inches at each launch site, and reset the gun on his shoulder before each shot.

"My best shooting has been 99-straight," he said. "If I don't do it (the two must-dos), I miss."

At the state tournament, Ahrendt is aiming for a possible score of 100.

"My strategy — I've been so busy this year — is to try to keep myself relaxed and put the stress of the day behind me," he said. "I've been teaching myself to struggle off a miss - you can't try to take it back because then you'll miss the next one."

He and senior teammate Eli Radtke both sported the new hairstyles to add some fun to their final track and field meet.

"We wanted to do something fun and different, while still being respectable," Sandbulte said, "I'm kind of known for my hair so it was funny. I started talking to some guys from other schools and they didn't even realize it was me at first."

Sandbulte plans to continue his track career at Valley City State University in Valley City, North Dakota, next year, where he will also play football for the VCSU Vikings.

When asked what he would miss most about Cardinal track, Sandbulte recognized his coaches while looking to the team's future.

"First, we have great coaches," Sandbulte said,

It was an offensive explosion when the Redbirds traveled to Hadley for a hot Sunday afternoon game.

Luverne tallied an impressive 25 runs off 20 hits in the game. All nine Redbird batters recorded hits, with six of them tallying multiple hits.

Lundgren was four for four at the plate and scored five runs in the game while adding four RBIs.

Skyler Wenninger, Ethan Beyer and Serie, who also scored four runs, had three hits each in the contest.

Serie blasted two home runs and Johnson had one.

The Birds set the tone of the game early by plating nine runs in the top of the first inning before the Buttermakers even got to bat.

Hadley answered with six runs in the second before Luverne scored nine more runs in the third to reach an 18-6 lead after three.

The Buttermakers had another six-run inning in the fifth, but the Redbirds kept adding runs. When the score was 25-13 at the end of

"I also like how there's a lot more interaction with the athletes from other schools," he said. "You really get to know your competitors but it's in a way more positive way. In football it seems like vou dislike vour opponents, but in track you meet more people from other schools on good terms."

Sandbulte gave the example of competitors from different Section 3A teams coming together for a photo at the state meet.

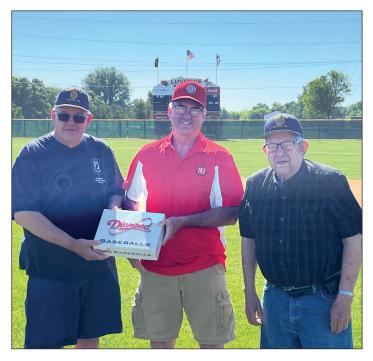

Known for his flowing hair on the track, Sandbulte surprised many at the state meet when he came to race with short, dyed-blonde hair. what he's doing. We even have kids from other schools tell us they wish they had a coach like J. That says something."

He also mentioned assistant coach Jodi Nelson, who works with the sprinters on the team. "She's a great coach, too."

Sandbulte added that the future looks bright for the Cardinal track and field program.

"The team will be very good in the future with a lot of talent coming up," he said. "For how young they are, they all did very well at state."

Whatever success the team has in the future, it may be a while until another LHS track athlete puts his or her name on the record board as many times as Sandbulte has.

An everyday faith

I have a simple two-part question that I want each of us to answer. Do we believe in Jesus, and does our everyday life reflect that?

It is important that people see us making choices and engaging in activities that reflect what we believe. That is what God expects from his people according to Deuteronomy 6:4-9: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God, the Lord is one. Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your strength. These commandments that I give you today are to be upon your hearts. Impress them on your children. Talk about them when you sit at home and when you walk along the road, when you lie down and when you get up. Tie them as symbols on your hands and bind them on your foreheads. Write them on the doorframes of your houses and on your gates."

Our faith in Jesus must be our lifestyle. It is not a decision we make once in our lives. It is a daily effort and commitment.

Jesus says we are to take up our cross daily and follow him. An everyday faith is not something seen only on Sunday mornings. It is exercised at home, at work and at play. Every single part of our lives needs to demonstrate what we believe to the world around us, or we are not practicing our faith every day. If we don't want to live out an everyday faith, then what is the point of believing in Jesus as Lord and Savior? Why believe if we don't want to live like we believe?

I think that is a fair thing for us to wonder about. We live in a hurting and divided nation. Our nation is in deep need of real role models. Maybe you agree that we need people to step up and lead in a positive and productive way.

We need to be those role models. We don't have to be famous or wealthy or powerful. We don't need to be serving in an elected office or be in a position of influence in our community.

When I think back in my own life to the people who had the biggest impact in my life, I realized that every one of them was an ordinary person. They were adult neighbors, relatives, school teachers, Sunday

Nutcrackers/from 6A _

"We just want people to be able to come in and see them and enjoy them," she said.

In 2016 Mann donated her personal collection of roughly 2,500 nutcrackers to the History Center after tourists who had heard about them were asking to view them in her home.

Community consultant Roger Brooks later told Luverne leaders that the nutcrackers are the "hook" that brings travelers into town, and he recommended focusing on nutcrackers for the town's "branding" campaign.

Meanwhile hundreds of people from all over the United States and world have come to see them.

"They know about us on the East Coast and on the West Coast, and they come from Australia, Africa, some places in South America, Japan," Mann said. "And they come specifically to see the nutcrackers."

She said she's proud of the display, but she's even more pleased that once people see the nutcrackers, they're compelled to tour the rest of the museum and learn about Rock County and its communities.

"That's been my goal all along — to get people to come into the museum," she said. "

"Quite often when they leave, they're talking not about the nutcrackers; they're talking about the claim shanty, and the Luverne Thirty Automobile and the buffalo and all the other historic items we have there."

I usually allow a few flowers on my gaillardia to go to seed because often the old plant doesn't survive the

In the case of columbine, perennial salvia and delphinium, cutting back hard after they have finished blooming will reward you with another round of flowers in the fall.

I have written about using a product called Milorganite as a repellent for rabbits and deer. Well, it worked for rabbits, sort of, but not as well as I wanted. Then I was told to try shaving a bar of Irish Spring soap and sprinkling those soap shavings directly on the plant the critters were munching on. Bingo! It worked really well!

One of my gardens is really big, and I had not had time to put up the electric fence. I have experienced minor deer damage previously, but this year they were ganging up on me. I protected my early crops with old bird netting I had used on my cherry trees and strawberries, and that worked, but my big garden is BIG and I have to rely on the electric fence for protection.

For some reason, once these critters pick a plant to munch on, they keep coming back to the same plant time after time, and in the case of perennials, if you don't protect that plant, you will not only lose the flowers, but the plant will be weakened and likely will not survive the winter.

In the case of vegetables, it's called sharing the harvest, and I vote "no" on that one, too.
